New-York Daily Times.

VOL. IV.....NO. 1176. NEW-YORK, MONDAY, JUNE 25, 1855. PRICE TWO CENTS.

TWO WEEKS LATER FROM CALIFORNIA.

Arrival of the Star of the West.

$620,208 on Freight.

AFFAIRS OF PAGE, BACON & CO.

SAN FRANCISCO CITY ELECTIONS.

More about the Walker and Kinney Expeditions.

CALIFORNIA MARRIAGES AND DEATHS.

THE MARKETS.

The steamship Star of the West, of the Nicaragua line, THOMAS MYERS, commander, with 203 passengers and $620,208 in specie on freight to C. MORGAN, Esq., arrived last evening.

The steamer Star of the West arrived outward at Punta Arenas on the morning of the 16th inst., connecting with the steamship Pacific, Capt. E. WAKEMAN, which left San Francisco on the 13th at 2 P. M., with 800 passengers for New-York and New-Orleans.

The U. S. mail steamer John L. Stephens, left San Francisco the same day with passengers for the Atlantic per the Nicaragua route.

The San Juan Steamer is now in vicinity loading consignees and transfer to new feature in this route) the passengers will proceed from the steamships direct to the Lake steamers, without changing or hesitation at the rapids of Machuca and Castillo, thus avoiding day delay at those places.

The Star of the West left Punta Arenas on the afternoon of the 15th, and arrived yesterday at 1 P. M. off Sandy Hook, but owing to a dense fog was unable to come in—7 days and 20 hours.

Left in port at San Juan del Norte H. B. M. steam-frigate Barracouta and French steam-frigate Alboran, awaiting the arrival of the KINNEY expedition; H. B. M. West India steamship Teviot, to sail next day for Aspinwall. U. S. sloop-of-war St. Marys left San Juan del Sur on the 7th, bound to Realejo. All well on board.

We are especially indebted to the Purser of the Star of the West and to the Pacific Express for late California papers, received in advance of all the other Companies.

Specie List per Steamship Star of the West.

Wells, Fargo & Co., N. Y.	$180,000	A. Van Valkenburg & Co., N. Y.	$20,000
J. A. Stevens, N. Y.	8,000	Chas. Morgan, New-Orleans	32,000
Bank of America, N. Y.	4,000	Wells, Fargo & Co., N. Y.	2,000
Maxwell, Parsons & Co., N. Y.	10,000	Wm. Sohn & Co., N. Y.	7,000
W. Salmon & Co., N. Y.	20,000	Drexel & Co., Philadelphia	3,700
J. Ward, N. Y.	2,000	Nesbit & Watson, Sel.	11,000
Kelly & Co., N. Y.	32,000	Sundry	4,000
Total	[illegible]		[illegible]

CALIFORNIA.

Summary of the Foreign's News.

The past fortnight has been characterized by no very important events. The weather through out the State has maintained that evenness and salubrity which has always placed California far in advance of her sister States in that respect. Accounts from the interior give glowing descriptions of the bounty of the country and of the general prosperity of the various branches of industry.

The date of the mutinous scenes on board the clipper ship John Land was brought before the U. S. District Court on the 15th inst. The crew, who were indicted for mutiny, were discharged, on the ground that, after Capt. PERCIVAL had once resigned the command of his ship, the contract between him and the crew ceased. The claim of the master and crew of the D. M. Hall is yet under adjudication, and will probably not be soon decided. The John Land was libeled immediately on her arrival from Tahiti. She entered this port on the 12th inst.

In the political world of San Francisco all has been astir. Under the new charter, the election for city officers took place on the 28th inst. The issues, it was generally understood, were to be between the Know-Nothings, or American Party, and the Anti-Know-Nothings, comprising the foreign born population of the city and the entire strength of the two wings of the old Democratic party. The latter held a convention on the evening of the 24th, when the following nominations were made: For Mayor, James Van Ness; Comptroller, A. J. Moulder; City Surveyor, J. J. Hoff; City Attorney, C. D. Judah; City Treasurer, Wm. McKibben; Tax Collector, W. G. Rose; City Marshal, Major Thomas Glenn; Harbor Master, John B. Scheffer; Clerk of Superior Court, H. J. Labatt. The nominations of the Know-Nothings were made May 25, and were as follows: For Mayor, S. P. Webb; Comptroller, Wm. Sherman; Surveyor, George Ryder; Attorney, Bailie Peyton; Treasurer, David S. Tomes; Tax Collector, Edward Bettens; Harbor Master, George Garwood; City Marshal, Hampton North; Clerk of Superior Court, J. B. McMinn. Numerous public demonstrations were made on the Democratic side from the day of their nominations up to that of the election, and probably more excitement, in a quiet way, was rife pending the struggle than during any other municipal election since the organization of the city Government of San Francisco. It was generally regarded as a test struggle between the foreign and native born citizens, and as such the result was looked forward to with an intensity of interest seldom equaled.

The election took place on the 28th May, and on the 30th the following result was known throughout the city:

Mayor—James Van Ness, Dem., 65 majority.
Treasurer—Wm. McKibben, Dem., 104 maj.
Comptroller—Andrew J. Moulder, Dem., 185 maj.
Tax Collector—Edw. T. Battens, K. N., 503 maj.
Harbor Master—Geo. B. Schaffer, Dem., 141 maj.
City Marshal—Hampton North, K. N., 3 maj.
Clerk Superior Court—J. B. McMinn, K. N., 217 majority.
City Attorney—Bailie Peyton, K. N., 54 maj.
Surveyor—J. J. Hoff, Dem., 314 maj.

For Aldermen and Assistant Aldermen, the following candidates were elected:

COMMON COUNCIL—Aldermen—First Ward, Chas. H. Corser, Dem.; Second Ward, Joseph Hopkins, Dem.; Third Ward, C. W. Hathaway, K. N.; Fourth Ward, J. W. Britton, K. N.; Fifth Ward, J. M. Tewksbury, K. N.; Sixth Ward, R. W. Slocum, Dem.; Seventh Ward, R. Rankin, K. N.; Eighth Ward, Wm. Greene, Dem. Assistant Aldermen—First Ward, Chas. Wilson, Dem.; Second Ward, R. J. Tobin, Dem.; Third Ward, E. P. Peckham, K. N.; Fourth Ward, H. J. Wells, K. N.; Fifth Ward, C. J. Bartlett, K. N.; Sixth Ward, J. Van De Water, Dem.; Seventh Ward, W. H. Dow, K. N.; Eighth Ward, J. B. Beldeman, Dem.

Our latest dates from Tahiti are to April 1. There is nothing of importance from the islands.

New gold placers have been opened in Siskiyou County, affording a field for thousands of laborers.

Our markets are filled with delicious fruit, the product of the gardens around San Francisco, and showing to what an extent all the delicacies of the orchard and garden may be produced under the genial influences of a California climate.

During eight days, counting from May 6, 40,302 77 ounces gold were deposited at the U. S. Branch Mint in this city, valued at about a million of dollars.

The steamer Senator sunk at Broadway wharf on the morning of the 5th of May, owing to some leaky seams in her hends. She was pumped out the next day, repaired and placed again on the route.

The reported defalcation of AUGUS FRIZZON, in December last, to account, his deficits amounted to about $137,000. Mr. FRIZZON was formerly financial manager of WELLS, FARGO & Co's Banking and Express establishment in Sacramento.

Since our last semi-weekly summary the following vessels have arrived from the Eastern States: ship Herald of the Morning, May 10, 68 days from New-York; ship Metropolitan, May 21, 148 days from New-York; ship Adelaide, May 21, 114 days from New-York.

The gold mines of "San Francisco del Oro," about 80 leagues back of Acapulco, are attracting some attention from the speculative portion of our community.

A cargo of tortoise (some weighing nearly a quarter of a ton,) has lately arrived in this city. They are from the Galapagos Islands.

The gambling law went into operation on the 17th of May, when all the gambling saloons in the State were shut up forever.

A sail boat was capsized on the 17th of May in the harbor, and a man named H. J. MULLER, cook of the U. S. cutter Ewing, was drowned. His body was found floating near Mare Island a few days after, and was decently interred.

The schooner Julia Pringle arrived in this harbor on the 17th inst. in fifty days from San Juan del Sur. She now returns from her unsuccessful voyage to the Ocoa Islands, which expedition was organized some months since for gold digging purposes.

The great nugget of gold which has been on exhibition at the banking institution of JAMES KING, of William, has been cracked down, and sets the owner $2,822 25.

In theatricals there has been no remarkable change in this city. Since the grand explosion among the Opera troupe at the Metropolitan, that theatre has been occupied by the BLONDIN sisters and Miss DAVENPORT, who has appeared in two or three leading parts. At the American, the usual excellent stock company has been playing to good houses, and "A Midsummer Night's Dream" has been brought on a scale of grace and splendor. The Italian Opera Troupe have opened the old Sacramento Theatre on their own account, giving tri-weekly representations to fashionable audiences. The San Francisco Minstrels, after a short sojourn in the mines, have returned and have resumed their laughable performances.

The ship Cleveland took fire from spontaneous combustion in her cargo of coal on the 15th instant, and it was found necessary to scuttle her to save the ship. The cargo was not damaged.

A shocking murder has been committed at Contra Costa, the perpetrators of which have not yet been apprehended. Mr. J. P. GILMORE, residing about eight miles from Oakland, was the victim.

Madame ANNA BISHOP and BOCHSA are giving concerts in the mines.

Snow is yet lying several feet in depth on the Sierra Nevada Mountains.

A fight between two men named FRANCISCO URUGUIANA and CHAS. LAMBERT took place on the Pulgas Ranch, near San Francisco, on the 21st instant, in which the former was instantly killed.

An Irishman, named EDWARD DUNN, attempted to commit suicide on the night of the 21st by cutting his throat with a penknife. He was saved by careful attention and carried to the Marine Hospital.

After several weeks' discussion the Board of County Supervisors have decided to purchase the lot and building situated at the corner of Greenwich and James streets, for a County Hospital. An appropriation of $24,000 has been made for the purchase. The State having resigned all interest in the old State Marine Hospital, all the county and city indigent sick will henceforth be at the expense of the county and the above provision has been made for their accommodation. The number is now 150.

The sentence of death pronounced upon JOHN BLAKE for murder has been commuted by Gov. BIGLER to one year's imprisonment in the State Prison. He was to have been hung on the 25th of May.

The San Francisco papers contain intelligence from both China and Australia, but our advices received lately by way of Europe were of a later date.

Meeting of Page, Bacon & Co.'s Creditors.

From the Times and Transcript, June 1.

Yesterday, at 2 o'clock P. M., the creditors of PAGE, BACON & Co., assembled at their Banking House, on the corner of Clay and Battery streets, pursuant to a call of a Committee appointed at the meeting at the Exchange on Friday last. About one hundred and fifty were present. Mr. BURR, formerly of BURR, MATSON & Co., was called to the chair, and Mr. HART, one of the Committee, reported to the meeting the action of the Committee, who stated that in discharge of their duty they had investigated into the assets, and the bond, and believe the bondholders could not be held responsible, therefore they had spoken to Mr. PAGE in regard to his securing the creditors, to which he had expressed his perfect willingness, but to assure matters, they had adressed him the following note:

SAN FRANCISCO, May 28, 1855.

MESSRS. PAGE, BACON & CO., SAN FRANCISCO.

GENTLEMEN: As a meeting of the creditors of the House of PAGE, BACON & Co., is to take place on Tuesday next, the Committee appointed at a meeting of the holders of the time certificates of the house on Thursday last, beg a reply to the following questions, viz.:

In the event of the attaching creditors agreeing to relinquish any legal rights acquired by them under their attachments, and the holders of time certificates agreeing to release any claim they may have on the obligors of the bond, will Mr. DANIEL D. PAGE execute in favor of the creditors of the house in California a mortgage upon his property in St. Louis, sufficient to secure to these creditors the payment of their several demands, with such interest, and at such period as may be agreed upon?

The assets now in the hands of the Trustees to be converted into cash under the direction of such person or persons as the House of PAGE, BACON & Co., and the creditors may appoint for such purpose, and the proceeds to be divided among the creditors in payment of their demands.

The Committee also suggest that Messrs. PAGE, BACON & Co., would favor the Committee with a statement of the affairs of the house, showing its present liabilities, and the assets available for the payment of its debts.

The meeting of the Creditors taking place to-morrow, it would be advisable, if practicable, that such statement should be furnished the Committee, either to-day, or before 12 o'clock, to-morrow.

As the Committee intend calling a meeting to-morrow of all the Creditors of PAGE, BACON & Co., it would be desirable to be informed of the exact state of the proposition of HENRY D. BACON, as it effects the indebtedness of the house of PAGE & BACON to the California house.

We remain gentlemen, your obedient servants,
WM. HART, Chairman, WM. B. BOURN,
THOS. H. SMILEY, D. HARDIN,
J. R. ROLLINSON, J. P. TREDWELL.

To which Mr. PAGE sent the following reply:

SAN FRANCISCO, May 28, 1855.

Messrs. Hart, Bourn, Smiley, Hardy, Rollinson and Tredwell, Committee, &c.

GENTLEMEN—Your communication of the 26th inst., addressed to PAGE, BACON & Co., was received this morning, and inasmuch as your inquiries relate chiefly to propositions addressed to me individually, I proceed to reply thereto, as well on my own behalf as on the part of the house. But before answering your inquiries specifically, I avail myself of this occasion to say, that I have thus far abstained from noticing the violent assaults made by certain newspapers upon my conduct and motives, not because I was afraid to meet and discuss such issues, but simply from a reluctance to engage in a newspaper controversy at a period when I have more important matters to occupy my time and thought. At any period of life, and especially when overwhelmed with anxiety and business cares, I feel a natural reluctance to engage in angry disputes with any one; and however grossly I may be misrepresented, if my past conduct through a long and active life, is not a sufficient defence against such assaults, any mere words of mine would fail of their purpose; but I may be permitted to say that until now I am not aware that my conduct or motives were ever questioned, and I think those with whom I have transacted business for more than thirty years, and among whom I have passed the best part of my life, will be slow to believe that I merit the opprobrious epithets which have been so profusely heaped upon me. For the first time in my life, it has recently been my misfortune, and that of the two houses with which I was connected, not to be able to meet our engagements punctually. Errors of judgment have doubtless contributed to this result, which has proved a great calamity, not only to ourselves but others. It is, however, some consolation to know that throughout these difficulties, I have had no other than an honest desire to do the most ample justice to all our creditors. With this view, we paid out, on our last suspension, every dollar remaining in our vaults; and inasmuch as certain gentlemen had signed a bond, whereby it was believed they had made themselves responsible for our time certificates, we transferred to two of their number, in trust, all our property and effects in California, as an indemnity against such liability. We believed at the time that this was an ample security, but were soon informed by the parties interested that it was not deemed sufficient, and further security was requested, to which I assented on condition that certain changes should be made in the trust fund, which, in my judgment, would render it more specifically available for the payment of the certificates. These conditions were not complied with, and, in the meantime, I was informed that malicious hints attached to the liability of the obligors on the bond. Under these circumstances I have continued to give further security, and thereby to encumber my estate, so as in a great measure to render it unavailable for the present for the payment of debts, to which purpose I intend to apply every dollar of it, if necessary. It is for the public to decide whether my conduct, under these circumstances, has been justifiable or not.

I trust, however, the inquiries contained in your letter and my response to them may tend to some arrangement which will be mutually satisfactory to all concerned, and I proceed now to answer them.

To the first I reply, that if the attaching creditors will release their attachments and stay all further legal proceedings, and if the holders of time certificates will release the obligors in the bond from all liability, real or supposed, and if the assets now in the hands of the trustees can now be placed in the hands of three persons to be mutually agreed upon by the house of PAGE, BACON & Co. and its creditors in California, with power in the new trustees to dispose of such assets for the best price, payable in any indebtedness of the house, or, if sold for cash, then the proceeds to be divided pro rata amongst all the creditors; upon these conditions I will execute a mortgage, or deed of trust, upon the property known as the "Martin Kennedy" tract, near St. Louis, conveying the same for payment, at the expiration of one year, of all the debts which the house of PAGE, BACON & Co. shall then owe, with interest in the meantime at the rate of ten (10) per cent. per annum, reserving, however, to myself the right, in the meantime, to sell or mortgage said tract, or any part of it, with the consent of one or more of the trustees to be named in said deed, and paying over to said trustees the entire proceeds of such sale or mortgage for the purpose of the trust. In my judgment the assets in California and the trust of land will be amply sufficient to pay the entire indebtedness of the house. Some gentlemen have expressed that my private estate had already been mortgaged or otherwise encumbered, and I take this occasion to say, that if such is the fact, I have no knowledge of it, for do I believe it is encumbered for a dollar. On my first visit to California, more than two years ago, I left with Mr. BACON a power of attorney, with a view of transacting certain business in the city of St. Louis. I do not remember the terms of this paper, and it may have been a general authority to convey lands. But if so, he has in no instance intimated to me that he has ever acted under it, or that he intended to do so, and I have no reason to believe that he has attempted to exercise any authority under it. I have not seen the paper since my arrival here; I have not, him or any other person, and the paper alluded to is the only one he has ever held of that character.

In accordance with your request, I hand you herewith a general statement of the liabilities and assets of the house of PAGE, BACON & Co., made up with as much accuracy as was practicable on so short a notice.

You have also intimated that the propositions submitted by Mr. BACON to the creditors of PAGE & BACON will prove satisfactory to the creditors of that firm to which members of Page, Bacon & Co. By the last steamer I received no advices from Mr. BACON, and have no knowledge of what transpired at the meeting, except what I have derived from the newspapers. But if his proposition has been carried into effect, (of which I have no doubt,) the debt due at St. Louis will have been fully liquidated, and from my knowledge of the assets of PAGE & BACON, I am thoroughly convinced that those will have the means to pay all the debts, including the debt of PAGE, BACON & Co., without the aid of my private estate. But I have renew the pledge which I made at the meeting, on the 26th of February, to wit: that every dollar of my private estate shall be applied, if necessary, to the payment of debts, including therein all debts due from the house of PAGE, BACON & Co., in California or elsewhere. I trust that whether in a prosperity or adversity, I am incapable of an unworthy artifice to shield any portion of my estate from the just demands of creditors. I have not lived to my advanced age, without reproach, that I may die at last with the stain of fraud upon my reputation.

I shall be ready, at any time, to confer with a Committee, if one shall be appointed, touching the foregoing propositions, and as I desire to secure home as early as practicable, I trust that whatever is to be done, may be done as speedily as possible. Respectfully yours,

DANIEL D. PAGE.

STATEMENT OF MR. PAGE.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 28, 1855.

LIABILITIES.

Time drafts, first installment	$ 79,049 88
Time drafts, second installment	106,165 05
Time drafts, third installment	131,270 39
Time drafts, fourth installment	101,741 19
	$418,226 51
Due depositors	427,336 19
Total	$845,565 67

ASSETS.

Bills receivable in cash, &c.	$ 81,457 00
Parrott & Naglee, as per their receipts	428,162 27
Cash in hands of Sheriff at Sacramento	44,750 00
In hands of Sheriff and under attachment at Sacramento	19,000 00
Due at the East	661,961 00
Due at Honolulu	45,800 70
Real Estate in California	900,000 00
Total	$1,681,069 00
	727,317 33
Less drafts, unprovided for	290,346 00
Surplus assets	$11,371 58

In regard to the attaching creditors, Mr. HART said, that representing as he did a large number, he could assure the meeting that they were willing to stay proceedings. A bystander then asked, what assurance did they have that the property of Mr. PAGE was not already mortgaged? To which reply was made by Mr. TREDWELL: None except Mr. PAGE's statement. Mr. HART had previously remarked that Mr. PAGE was never aware of any mortgage being in existence. Mr. P. had given a power of attorney to Mr. BACON over some real estate, on account of some lawsuits in reference to land; but had no intimation of the tract he had offered as security being mortgaged. Mr. ROLLINSON informed the meeting that Messrs. NAGLEE and PARROTT were willing to surrender their trust into the hands of new trustees, provided they were relieved from the responsibility. In answer to an inquiry from Mr. H. C. CLARK, Mr. HART stated that it was the opinion of many of the legal profession that the bondsmen were not liable for the debts of P. B. & Co., and it would relieve the courts and the creditors of suits if the attachments would be released. The report of the Committee was accepted.

It was then stated that in addition to the security offered by Mr. PAGE, Mr. C. K. GARRISON tendered $400,000 worth of property, located in and about this city, as additional security to creditors, and wished a committee of two appointed to value the same, one from the meeting, the other from himself. During the explanation and discussion of this matter, Mr. DOYLE, of the Price Current, took occasion to endeavor to investigate into the statements, and the tender of the security made, but was interrupted. He made particular mention of the fact that no explanation had been given in regard to the exchange sold since the resumption, which had been protested in New-York and elsewhere. Mr. ROLLINSON, on ascertaining that Mr. DOYLE was a creditor to a small amount, offered to satisfy that gentleman's claim, which Mr. DOYLE, with becoming spirit, refused to accept, stating that all he wanted was simple justice to all, but more particularly to the creditors; and he desired a fair statement and some explanations in regard to the matters he had mentioned, and the exact quality of Mr. PAGE's security, neither of which matters were further spoken of. On motion of Mr. SOLOVER, the time certificate holders accepted the proposition of Messrs. PAGE and GARRISON, and on motion of the same gentleman, a committee of four, consisting of Messrs. SMILEY, CLARK, ROLLINSON and HART, were chosen by the meeting for the purpose of conferring with the attaching creditors, and to arrange, if possible, that they should accept the proposition of a transfer of a trust, and Messrs. PAGE and GARRISON's offered security. The meeting then adjourned, to assemble to-day at 2 o'clock P. M., at the Exchange, to receive the report of the above committee, and it was particularly requested that the attention of every creditor of the house should be called to the meeting, with a view of obtaining the presence of the entire number to-day.

The Kinney Expedition—Probable Affiliation of Walker and Kinney—Letter from Head-quarters.

From the Alta California.

By the kindness of Col. HIRAM PEARSONS, we have obtained the following letter written to him by Col. KINNEY, and received by the John L. Stephens, from which it would appear that the original idea of landing at Blewfields has been abandoned, and consequently that the plan of colonizing the Mosquito Territory with Americans has been given up, at least for the present. From the intentions expressed by Col. KINNEY in his letter, it is evident that the WALKER forces from San Francisco, and the KINNEY immigrants from New-York, will meet about the centre of Nicaragua, and the results of their junction can hardly be doubted, as far as the permanent location of an American colony is concerned. The mines referred to in the letter are those in the districts of Segovia and Chontales, on the foot hills of the Cordillera, rising eastward from the Lakes Managua and Nicaragua. They have long been celebrated for their productiveness. Nearly all the silver ore extracted from these mines contains more or less gold, which is now separated in a rude method by smelting.

It is not generally known that WALKER enters Nicaragua by the express invitation of GUERRIZOM, the Democratic candidate for President, and still waging war against the servile or legitimate party, ruled by the chiefs of the late President CHAMORRO. A formal contract with the seals of State, and signatures of the constitutional authorities attached, was procured by a citizen of San Francisco more than six months since, at the suggestion of CASTILLON himself, and forwarded to WALKER; and upon this contract he is now acting. It grants WALKER and the party forming the first expedition, to aid the Democratic party, 72,000 acres of territory, to be chosen from any public lands in Nicaragua, "to them, their heirs, associates and assigns forever."

Should the Castillon party prove successful, WALKER & Co. have an immense tract of country in the garden of the world, and here, in connection with KINNEY, who is purchasing lands on the eastern side of Lake Nicaragua, a flourishing American colony may in time spring up, and perhaps prove the nucleus about which the entire country will gradually become settled by Americans, and pass into American hands. No foreign invasion could more effectually ravage and destroy Nicaragua than the barbarous warfare which has desolated the country for the last twelve months. Grenada, the most beautiful city of Central America, situated on Lake Nicaragua, is in ruins, Masaya half destroyed, Leon, Rivas, and Chinandega depopulated; the crops throughout the land going to waste for want of laborers, and all commerce decreased, or scared into inactivity. Here, then, appears to be a promising field for Yankee enterprise, while the direct solicitation of the ruling powers brings the "Americanos del Norte" to their assistance. All the products of Cuba thrive in Nicaragua, and many which are not cultivated in the former place. One thing is evident, that a powerful movement is going forward towards Central America from both sides of the United States. What these expeditions—commercial, belligerent, mineralogical, and colonial will amount to, time must determine. The following is the letter referred to:

NEW-YORK, April 20, 1855.

MY DEAR COLONEL: I have omitted writing to you until now, because I did not know what my moves would be. I have at last arranged to start on the 7th of May, on the steamship United States, I have Semmes, my boy to take my commissions, and friends to hear from, where I shall remain for a short time. I have purchased, in company with our United States Consul, Mr. FARRAS, a large tract of country situated on the Nicaragua Lake, on which there is some very valuable gold, silver and coal mines.

I think, Colonel, that when Central America is settled up by good American citizens, and a firm Government established, it will be one of the most productive and rich countries in the world.

Now, my dear Colonel, you were so liberal with me when here, as to let me have an interest with you in your California operations, that I feel it a duty to offer you, on the same liberal terms, an interest with me in my Central American enterprise. There can be no loss, and there may be a very great gain. My enterprise is a large one, and I have every confidence of my success.

If you can spare the time, come down and meet me at Virgin Bay or at San Juan del Sur. I should like much to see you, and make your visit profitable to you. I saw Mr. WHITEHOUSE to-day; he inquired particularly after you. Write me at San Juan and Virgin Bay, and believe me Your sincere and devoted friend,

H. L. KINNEY.

OREGON.

We have Oregon papers to the 26th of May. The papers are crowded with political disquisitions and violent partisan abuse. In fact, they contain nothing else. The General Election takes place throughout the Territory on the first Monday in June, at which time a delegate is to be elected to Congress, and members of the Legislature and other County officers to be chosen. Gen. GAINES, the Whig and Know-Nothing candidate, and Gen. LANE, the Democratic candidate, have been stumping the Territory for a month past. At a meeting in Dallas, Polk County, they got so excited that LANE called GAINES a liar, whereupon a fight took place upon the stand in presence of an interested and excited audience. The belligerent candidates were separated just in time to prevent a free fight between their friends all around. They continued their canvass together afterwards notwithstanding, and were to address the people of Portland on the 26th. To judge by the fury of the Oregon papers, one would suppose that upon the result of the political campaign there depended the destinies of the world.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

More Lynching—Two Men Killed.

A terrible tragedy was enacted at the village of Lexington or Monte, twelve miles from Los Angeles, on the 13th ult. The particulars, as derived from the local papers, and from other sources, are as follows: On the 9th ult. a man named WM. FAINE swore to an affidavit before Justice CUNNINGHAM, to the effect that one BROWN—a brother of DAVID-BROWN, who was lynched at Los Angeles some three or four months ago—had organized a band of men for the purpose of robbing and killing; that he (FAINE) had been induced to join the band through fear, and that a portion of the gang was, at the time of making the affidavit, at Turner's Pass, in the neighborhood of the Tejon.

The people of Lexington were very much excited upon hearing this statement by FAINE, and immediately proceeded to Turner's Pass, where they arrested five men, WILLIAM WATSON, WILLIAM HAND, ADOLPHUS E. MOORE, POLK WILKERSON, and a man named GARRETSON. These were taken to the Monte, where, on Saturday, the 12th inst. a Lynch trial was held, and it was resolved to hang all save GARRETSON, who was declared to be innocent of any crime. They were accordingly led out and the ropes placed about their necks, when another vote was taken, that to hang was reconsidered, and it was decided to turn them over to the civil authorities. The constable then took them in custody, and a number of the citizens formed a guard to insure their safe keeping. During the next night (Sunday) some six or eight men entered the building where the accused were confined, told them they could say their prayers, as they should be hung in ten minutes, and then proceeded to put their threat in execution. HAND and WILKERSON were first taken out, but, in the darkness of the night, HAND contrived to untie his arms and escape from his executioners. Some twelve or fourteen shots were fired at him, but he succeeded in avoiding pursuit, and on the next evening reached Los Angeles, claimed the protection of the law, and was locked up in jail. WILKERSON also managed to unloose the rope from about his neck, and escaped to parts unknown. MOORE was shot while in his bed. He had previously received a severe wound in the thigh, which rendered him helpless; and, after the escape of HAND and WILKERSON, one of the bystanders, named JOSE, a Mexican, came up to his bed, placed a pistol to his head, and literally blew his brains out. WATSON was also shot, although there were some evidences that an attempt had been made to hang him, his neck being considerably lacerated. In the morning his body was found riddled with balls.

Of course, the excitement consequent upon these events was very considerable, and an attempt was made to bring the perpetrators of these outrages to justice. Judge HAYES, of the District Court, had taken ineffectual measures to have the affair judicially investigated, and it is now pretty certain that they cannot be brought to a trial.

SANDWICH ISLANDS.

News from the Sandwich Islands is to the 5th of May, but of no importance.

The correspondent of the San Francisco Alta California writing from Honolulu on that date says:

The House of Representatives has been in session about a month, and has been somewhat remarkable for expediting business. The most important act of the session was the new Tariff act, which has passed both Houses, and only waits the King's signature to become a law. It is to go into effect in twelve months from the date of its approval, "provided that it is not in violation of any treaty existing at the time." This means, provided that France, in the meantime, shall have made a new treaty with this Government; for under the French treaty as it at present stands, no duty can be imposed upon French goods higher than 2 per cent. ad valorem, and, of course, every other nation must be treated as well as "the most favored nation." Spirits, liquors, cordials, &c., of the strength of proof, are by this law to be taxed $9 per gallon, instead of $5, as formerly; wines over 18 and under 30 per cent., $1 per gallon; all other goods, wares, and merchandise, as per schedules C, D, and E, respectively, 15, 10, and 5 per cent. ad valorem.

The King's popularity with all classes continues. His Majesty's policy shows thus far that his was no idle boast that he intended to commence a new era. I understand that he is highly displeased with the majority of the representatives for defeating the wine bill, which was a favorite project with him while a member of the Upper House. Hints are given that His Majesty may, if matters legislative should go too wide of the mark, exercise his power under the constitution, and send the honorables home. "A consummation devoutly to be wished."

Our market is abundantly supplied with lumber of all qualities and descriptions, and buildings (frail ones, true,) are going up in all directions, giving things a business-like appearance.

San Francisco Markets—Semi-Monthly Commercial Summary.

From the Placer Times, June 1.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, May 30, 1855.

FLOUR—We quote to-day a tolerably active jobbing trade in comparison with most of the days of this week, but nothing of marked importance, save the auction sale held by Messrs. DE RO, BENDIXEN & Co., this morning. At this were sold 500 sx. sacks Happy Valley Mills at $5; 2,072 do. do. do. at $4 90—all without guarantee. The jobbing trade ranges up thus: 50 bbls. Gallego at $12; 1,000 sx. sacks Magnolia Mills at $7; 2,000 do. direct on private terms, for shipment, and 300 do. at $7, also for exportation; 350 sacks Oregon sold for $7; 250 do. Golden Gate at $7 50; 500 do. do. at $7; 200 do. Chile at $7; 100 do. Ashley's Gold Rising at $10; 45 cases Buffalo Mills at $12 50.

MEAL—The market is dull and but few sales have been noted. 100 qr. sacks sold for $3 25 @ sack.

RICE—150 sacks sold at 11c. @ 11c.

WHEAT—The market seems unsteady. It has been very inactive, but still operations have been made at rates showing a decline on the former pretensions of holders. Still the mass of sellers decline offering at the reduced rates, assigning as a reason their belief that the coming harvest will not be a heavy one, and that after it is gathered and the new crop in the market, that rates will not rule, in view of the anticipated demand, any lower than they do at present. We quote sales of 500 sacks at $1 77½; 1,000 do. at $1 65; 150 and 50 do. at 1½.

BARLEY—Has been exceedingly quiet to-day; much more so than it has been for some time past. Nothing sales even of small lots have been remarkably low. 100 sacks and 50 do. sold at $1 20.

OATS—The market is very purely nominal. We know of no transactions whatever.

POTATOES—But few sales have been effected. The heavy crop being on in the eve of arriving renders the market perfectly lifeless. 150 sacks sold for 45c.; 300 do., at 60c.; and one lot of 2,000 lbs. New, at 1½c.

SOAP—2,000 boxes Pale No. 1, sold in five lots, at from 7½c. @ 8c.

TEAS—50 cases Young Hyson sold at 40c., and 70 cases Blacks sold at 55c.

DRIED APPLES—250 half bbls., and 150 do. do. sold at from 9½c. @ 10c., ex Kingfisher.

SUGAR—455 bbls. Crushed and Powdered, at 11½ @ 12c.

RICE—1,000 mats China No. 1, ex Rachmond, sold at 6c.

BUTTER—276 firkins, of recent importations, sold at 23½c. @ 24c.

BRANDIES AND GENEVA—30 cases Brandy Peaches, in half gallon jars, sold at $10; 100 cases and 1,200 do., in two lots, ex Kathay and Harriet Howe, sold on terms not made public.

PICKLES—27 cases Gherkins, in half-gallon jars, sold at $3 75.

MOLASSES AND SYRUP—500 half bbls. ex Kathay, sold on private terms.

SALT—27 cases, in 10 and 20 lb. bags, sold on terms not stated.

COAL—300 tons Anthracite, ex Kingfisher, sold on private terms.

HOPS—40 bales sold on private terms.

SHOT FILE—50 half bbls. sold at 7c.

GUNNIES—100 bales Gunny Bags sold last evening and to-day at 12c.; and 40 bales do., this evening at 12½c. cash.

NAILS—500 kegs, ex Kathay, sold at 5c.; and 250 do., ex do., on private terms.

CIGARS—6,000 No. 2 Manilla Cheroots sold at $15.

California Marriages and Deaths.

MARRIED.

In San Francisco, on the 17th inst., by Rev. Dr. Scott, Dr. E. H. Pardee, formerly of Detroit, Mich., to Miss Mary Pease, recently from Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio.

At Wood's Ferry, May 7, by J. H. Woods, Esq., Mr. George L. Calaway to Miss Amanda M. Church, both of Dry Creek.

In San Francisco, May 21, by Rev. Dr. Scott, Mr. W. B. Peake to Mrs. Sophia Lester.

In San Francisco, on the 22d inst., by Rev. R. Beldsey, Mr. Hamilton J. May and Miss Helen J. Goodchild, both of San Francisco.

At San Jose Mission, May 23d, by Rev. John Henry Brodt, Julius R. Rose, Esq., of San Francisco, to Miss Nelly A. Ellsworth, daughter of E. L. Beard, Esq., of the former place.

On the 10th inst., at the Excelsior Spring House, near Mokelumne Hill, by Rev. Mr. Henry, Mr. Henry E. Russell of Nantucket, Mass., to Miss Anna H. Fenton, of Toronto, Canada.

At Campo Seco, on the 24th of May, by Rev. B. D. Henry, Mr. Robert F. Wheeler, of Zanesville, Ohio, to Miss Lucy McNeilly, of San Francisco.

In Sacramento, May 23, Henry W. Drage to Sarah E. daughter of Capt. D. Martin.

DIED.

In San Francisco, May 20, of brain fever, Eugene Grob, aged six years, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Grob.

On Tuesday morning, 20th inst., at Oakland, Henry, infant son of Henry and Jane Eliza Reed, of San Francisco, aged 1 year, 3 months and 20 days.

In San Francisco, May 20, of Panama fever, after an illness of six months, Augustus Morris, late of Philadelphia, in the 44th year of his age.

Lecture on the Moral and Religious Condition of Missouri.

REV. FRANK STARRS, recently of Western Missouri, delivered a lecture last evening at the Broadway Tabernacle, on the moral and religious condition of Missouri. The attendance was respectable and attentive.

In presenting a brief outline, Mr. STARRS began: Of the moral and religious condition of Missouri, he should endeavor to do nothing more nor less than give a brief epitome of the different Church organizations existent there, with their relative growth and strength.

What must be the moral condition of its inhabitants could then be readily inferred. Foremost in the State, not only numerically but in the influence it exerted, stood the Catholic Church. This Church had its head quartered at St. Louis, and in that city numbered over 50,000 adherents. Throughout the State, in almost every town, was a Catholic organization, with numerous Cathedrals scattered here and there.

Next in importance, in strength of numbers and power, was the Methodist Episcopal Church. This Church was divided into the Methodist Episcopal Church South and the Methodist Episcopal Church North. There was a strong hostile feeling against the northern section, so much so, that even the Legislature had refused to grant charters to institutions originating under their auspices.

Throughout the State there were but some dozen churches belonging to this Church North. There were some seventy German Churches, however, who sided with the Northern Section. The constituents in these was good. They were the sole, indeed, that preserved society from the evil influences, in a literary point of view, exercised by the more populous South-ern Section.

The next Church alluded to was the Baptist Church. This Church, it was stated, was also divided into two sections—one called the Hersedites, the other the Siddites—these names corresponding with the terms North and South, as applied to the Methodist Episcopal Church. Of this Church, thus divided, he could say but little. In the aggregate, they were as transitory as revivals as at camp meetings here, and they fit as quick from the quickening work of the Spirit. Of the Presbyterians, he would mention as noteworthy, and perhaps not as universally known as it might be or should be, that some of them drank freely, both Laity and Clergy.

In one town he had known seven ministers to be so drunk that not one was able to stand to take the sacramental elements. He thought it was better that they should drink a little more to home conversion, and not to subvert the heathen.

Next, in point of number, the speaker stated, stood the Campbellite Church. Its leader, ALEXANDER CAMPBELL, sought in the establishment of this Church to unite the one hundred and forty-four tribes scattered in the Mississippi Valley.

What the Church throughout is, it is almost impossible to say. It found, indeed, a sort of common ground in which all—be their faith, creed, or bias what they might be—could be gathered. The dominant belief of the Church, and one of its distinctive features, was that the sinner, was only to believe that Christ was the Son of God

NOTICES OF NEW BOOKS.

A Batch of Novels.

We cannot close the world of a "batch of novels and romances" without paying, in the usual way of doing this, a word or two on each—briefly indicating our opinion of them respectively. It would be for the advantage of book purchasers if reviewers would adopt some way of letting their readers know when a work is original, when compiled, and when merely a bagatelle from some Magazine.

The Winkles; or, The Merry Monomaniac, by the author of Will Western Hunter, is put forth as an American picture, with portraits, and is published by the APPLETONS. It is a book of no ordinary pretension, and of considerable, but not commanding merit. Up to a certain point the story moves pleasantly enough, and then, as if the author had an after-thought, it deviates into the mysteries of Know-Nothingism, Jesuitism, and office-hunting. This deviation occupies about a fourth of the entire story, by which it makes a "most jolly and amusing conclusion." Worse than this, though the portrait of Honoria Fimble is well drawn, and very warmly colored, this portion of the tale is merely intrusive to the rest. What can be the object of a writer, who, writing a novel of the present day, boldly introduces the President of the United States as one of his leading characters, and actually shows him interfering for and against the applicants for office? The President's Secretary is also introduced, intriguing with a set of Jesuits, foremost among whom is an attractive but abandoned woman, passing off as a wife, who, is represented as throwing her spells of personal fascination over young and old at Washington, and causing all sorts of heart-quakes among the officials and legislators there. We think that the story might or have terminated with Lucy Winkle's being married in her teens, Mr. Lowe, and that such a consummation was eminently proper. By the way, the author should have endowed such a hackneyed character as introducing a mysterious gentleman, under a cloud, who eventually turns out to be an English nobleman. This has been used-up, almost out of mind, and never had even the merit of probability.

The general outline of the story, a red-faced, middle-aged British Boland, or another old sequelaire, Billy Bogle, a female servant, who appears for the exclusive purpose of perpetually turning up to fill a frog catcher Dill Bizzle, instead of Bill Bizzle, (his real name,) is another awful failure. The proper names, manufactured sometimes to express qualities and position, are absurd. A retired pill-maker is called Aram; a politician figures as Mr. Plastic; a shopkeeper is termed Mr. Ribbon; a milliner appears as Miss Gauze; a physician is Dr. Nibs; an upstart banker is Mr. Shekels; a gardener is Old Dibble; a story Scotchman is set down as McCrotchet; a cockney maid is termed Betty O'Pan; a Scotch physician, given to talking, is Doctor McGab; a duellist is Colonel Ball; and so on. This description of nomenclature is very childish. The book has several good points, however. The great character is Napoleon Winkle, a monomaniac on the subject of Napoleon, who has an attendant, one Sergeant Bleve, nearly as daft as himself. These are modern editions of My Uncle Toby and Corporal Trim. There is an old maid, named Wilmina Winkle, who, with her attachment to the game of Whist, and her truly generous disposition, was our heart at once. Edith Winkle, with her clever self, and her handsome daughter, merrily laughs her way into the reader's affections, and John Dowly, who loved her in his youth, and ever retains the feeling, is worth his weight in gold. Mr. Lowe, the lover, is a milk-and-water character. Miss Grant, who promised well at start, becomes alternately commonplace and melo-dramatic, towards the close. Harold Pollen, the poet, is a dilution of EDGAR POE. The angel reader, Flora Bloom, is well drawn and well sustained. The Winkles will amuse the reader, but is deficient in artistical skill of construction. Its author can write something vastly superior.

Come Out Corners, by BENAULT, (whoever he may be, when at home,) is a volume well got up, and enriched with several superior wood-cuts. It professes to be "the experiences of a Conservative family in fanatical times, involving some account of a Connecticut village, the people who lived in it, and those who came there from the City." This is rather an affected title, (evidently fashioned on the DICKENS style,) but there is very little affectation in the story itself, or the manner in which it is related. It inculcates a Temperance lesson, but teaches rather by incidents and the development of character than by actual homilies thrust upon the reader, in a fiction,—like Turkey rhubarb mixed up with honey, to be spread on a round of bread, in the vain hope of deceiving a wide-awake cockle, who requires a corrective after too much green fruit. The story is American in every respect. The scene lies between a village in Connecticut and our own Babylon of New-York. The family whose various members figure in the book are the Chesselburies, and best drawn among them is Hon. Lafayette Chesselbury, No. 27 Washington-square, New-York. Great, also, is Jason L., with his cousin and sweetheart Belinda; noticeable is honest Paul Rundle, M. D., with Freddie, his intended; and high among them comes the lofty presence of Captain Mayflower. Our only decided objection to the conduct of the story is the repetition, ragas ad nauseam, of the Captain's drunken manifestations; they might have been more sparingly introduced, or advantageously omitted. The gabble of incompetence is shocking to hear—can it be pleasant to read it? The literary merit of the book is much above the average. In descriptions of country incidents and persons the author's strength appears principally to lie. We shall be glad to meet him again, in this or any other field of literature. If this be a first work, it is a remarkably creditable effort. Published by MASON BROTHERS, New-York.

The Missing Bride; or, Miriam the Avenger, is the magnificent title of a new novel, written by Miss CATHERINE SYKES, and published by T. B. PETERSON, of Philadelphia. With the volume we received a sheet of "Opinions from the Press," which informed us that "Mrs. SOUTHWORTH is, beyond all question, the most powerful female writer in America, if not in the world,"—that she is "equalled but by few and excelled by no living female writer,"—that she "is the most original and talented of living female writers,"—that, "as a story-writer, this lady has no superior,"—that she is "decidedly the best American writer of the age,"—that she is "a woman of brilliant genius,"—and so on. Well, we have carefully read the book—six hundred and thirty-five pages, on a Summer's day!—and does our opinion agree with those above quoted? It does not. The story possesses a variety of incident, and is not deficient in interest. Here and there we notice detached passages, and even scenes, of considerable power and beauty, but the general texture of the work is—it is decidedly verbose. There is unnecessary description which might not be improved by the free and judicious use of the printing knife, and there are pages upon pages of dialogue, which by no means develope the characters, and somehow do not enlighten the action of the story. We can readily imagine that Mrs. Southworth, who has put in hand and written away, without hesitation or thought, until she has covered as many quires of paper as will give form to substantial volumes, could do this before us. Let us assure her that one her ability, (though not quite "the best American writer of the age,") to which she ought to do something like justice, by studying condensation of language and ideas. This Missing Bride would have been twice as good as it is, if it had been cut down, after the original sense of composition had subsided, to one-half its present bulk.

Florine, the Princess of Burgundy, is a duodecimo tale of the First Crusades, published by MILT GREEN WOOD & Co., Baltimore, (the story, distinctively) put it office. "A New and Popular Historical Tale, by a distinguished author," and then extracts from letters of eminent authorities addressed to Mr. W. B. MACCABE, the author, by private friends. Against the folly of such puffs we may place, as a creditable set-off, that Messrs. MURPHY have "generously offered to compensate the author for his literary labor, regardless of the right accorded by the existing law, to publish without assigning any such compensation." As regards the story of Florine, we can only say that, so far as historical accuracy of detail is concerned, Mr. MACCABE has been most successful. He has evidently consulted and compared a variety of authorities, and constructed a reliable narrative out of the whole. As respects the delineation of character, or the awakening a strong interest in the reader's mind on behalf of the personages, real or imaginary, who figure in the story, he has failed. The persons whom he brings most prominently forward we do not care for. The best of them, an unmitigated old scamp, who pretends to be a magician, and actually, (in the time of the Crusaders!) manipulates with mesmeric passes, like CAGLIOSTRO or the quacks of the present day, never pleases us so much as when he swallows poison and dies. One of the heroines, named Gunhilda, thinks nothing of inflicting two pages of semi-polemical harangue upon her audience, without once drawing breath; indeed, the story is semi-religious in purpose and execution. Mr. MACCABE makes a Crusader say, "I am the scourgeister of no calumnies;" puts a soliloquy of over two pages into the mouth of one of his characters; translates "O clemens, O pia, O dulcis Virgo Maria," into "Oh! mere clemency! mere pious! mere sweet!" marks emphatic passages in dialogue by italics and small capitals, (as if people ever talk in that manner!) and, when relating the death in battle of a combatant, most tolerantly says: "Lifeless he fell to the earth, and his soul descended to the devils in hell." How can Mr. MACCABE know where or to whom it went? Fiction, if we may judge from the specimen before us, is not Mr. MACCABE's forte. Wherever he has to relate events, his language is tense and his narrative clear. The concentrated account of the capture of Antioch is equal to many battle descriptions in SCOTT. Indeed there are many other passages which we can commend almost as warmly—but when the author quits the solid basis of fact, and seeks a footing on the airy pinnacles of fiction, he quits his own vantage-ground, and appears as a somewhat prosy and dull raconteur.

TICKNOR and FIELDS, of Boston, have published two delightful novels by CHARLES READE, an English author, which are likely—if merit be the key to popularity—to have an extensive sale. They are respectively named Peg Woffington and Christie Johnstone. Both are well written, but the first-named is the best. The heroine of Christie Johnstone is a fish-woman, with great beauty, much shrewdness, some property, a special gift in bargain-making, and an atrocious Scotch brogue, which Mr. READE inflicts upon his readers in a very remorseless and tyrannic manner. There are two or three heroes: One is the Viscount Ipsden, a wealthy peer, who, despite youth, health, and brains, is dying of ennui, and to cure himself, takes to the novelty of doing good; another is an English artist named Gatty, who falls in love with Christie Johnstone, (malgré her abominable brogue!) and we are doubtful whether Sanders, who is "gentleman's gentleman" to Lord Ipsden, and Fincher Johnstone, a cub who eventually becomes a sailor, may not also be named in the same heroic category. The story ends very well, in a double marriage. The incidents, though not very probable, are well put together; but there are some incongruities—such as Christie Johnstone, who reads and understands Shakspeare, invariably addressing Viscount Ipsden as "Vile Count,"—she would have seen otherwise in the pages of her favorite author. Nevertheless, the book is worth perusal, and ought to be popular.

Peg Woffington is a fiction cast in a very different mould. The heroine, whose parents were in the lowest rank of Ireland, was born in 1719, had an almost intuitive taste for theatricals, and, while yet young, obtained such considerable success in Dublin and London that she realized a large fortune, which she liberally disbursed. Her performance of Sir Harry Wildair is said to have been inimitable. With many good and generous impulses, this woman lived the life of a prodigate. Her beauty of face and form was great; her manners lively and attractive; her fascination almost resistless. At the age of 38, with her attractions scarcely diminished, she quitted the stage, (moved to that step, it was reported, by accidentally hearing a sermon, in which some errors of life, like her own, were forcibly touched upon,) and for the remaining three years of her mortal existence, her course was so exemplary that one of her biographers was justified in declaring that "she retained all the amiable, and not one of the blamable qualities of her early life." This is the woman whom Mr. READE has made the heroine of a story, told with natural truth and dramatic power; a story which, despite the character of the lady, contains no line which the most fastidious moralist can object to. He has introduced her in the green-room and in private life with several characters of the time, including COLLEY CIBBER and QUIN—who are capitally sketched. The tale is made up, we believe, from a Comedy called "Masks and Faces," written by Mr. READE and Mr. TOM TAYLOR, which we recollect having seen acted, about two years ago, at BURTON's theatre. In that piece, two characters were admirably represented—Triplet, unequaled in the make-up, by Mr. GEORGE BARRETT, and Triplet (who is "scene-painter, actor, and writer of sanguinary plays,"—a very Cerberus of Art,) was personated by Mr. BURTON. Poor TRIPLET! never was more justice done to any character than was rendered to yours by BURTON, but never did audience more entirely misconceive it. They were accustomed to laugh at him, even before he uttered a word, and wholly misconceived him when he entered into the pathos of a grotesque, but by no means comic part. That acting was one of the best things ever performed by BURTON, as artist, indeed, of great merit and versatile powers. The stage-representation of the story predisposed us in favor of Peg Woffington, and we earnestly recommend the book.

A School of Life, written by ANNA MARIA HOWITT, and published by TICKNOR & FIELDS, of Boston, deserves notice as a book very much out of the ordinary routine of modern fiction. It has an agreeable plot, some well-drawn characters, a pleasing variety of probable incidents, and—without the slightest attempt at the impertinence of making a novel the vehicle of a homily—a truly religious and moral aim well worked out. Miss HOWITT (who is an accomplished, talented, and pretty young woman, daughter of WILLIAM and MARY HOWITT, as well known in modern literature,) is an artist of some pretensions and an authoress of some little note. Her Art-Student in Munich showed ability. In the book before us, there is a good deal about art and artists, written in a kindly and appreciative manner, and we cordially speak of it as a very agreeable, well-written, and true-hearted work.

My Brother; or, The Man of Many Friends, is a story written by Mrs. ELLIS. We can tell those who dislike the platitudes of her wearisome Women of England, and the dead weight of her Family Secrets, that this little volume is nearly as good as her Pictures of Private Life, published nearly a quarter of a century ago, when she was plain SARAH STICKNEY, and had not set up as a great moral teacher. The story, which is full of humor, has an agreeable air of truth, the incidents are not strained,—the characters are well drawn. In fact, it is a quiet, good-natured Temperance story, which we particularly recommend to youth. Published by ANSON D. F. RANDOLPH, N. Y.

The last issued volumes of STRINGER & TOWNSEND's popular edition of COOPER's novels is Miles Wallingford, a sequel to Afloat and Ashore, which last we have not received. This is not among the best of the series, but contains some stirring scenes and exciting incidents.

KANSAS.

Present and Prospective Condition of Things.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

ST. LOUIS, TUESDAY, June 19, 1855.

An intimate friend, who has just returned from the Western border, has given me much information relative to Kansas and the condition of the public mind there, and in the adjacent counties of this State. I have no theory to establish, and no side to espouse in the conflict now in progress there. I give you such facts as have come to my knowledge, upon which you and your readers may form your opinions.

There is but little superficial excitement along the border—a stranger passing through would scarce discover any. But if any one will look below the surface, as he may do by conversing freely with Pro-Slavery and Anti-Slavery men, he will discover that the feeling is deep and determined on both sides. The Missourians, and other emigrants from the Slave States, look upon those sent there by the aid societies as worse than brigands and pirates, while the latter look upon the former as reckless, bloody-minded enemies of human freedom. It is obvious enough that these two classes can never be harmonized. A social war is the inevitable result of their contrast of opinion and sentiment. That war is now in progress. It is for the present only a war of words, but it will be accelerated within a twelvemonth, into a war of riots, and this will again necessarily be aggravated into a war involving the whole of the two parties. Whether this conflict, bloody and unsparing as it must become, will involve the States of the Union, time alone can determine.

When the Legislature of Kansas assembles on the first Monday in July, you will see that I have not exaggerated. That body is overwhelmingly Pro-Slavery, and it will enact many laws hard for Northern men to swallow. Property in Slaves will be distinctly recognized and rigidly protected; seditious publications will be suppressed, and all Free-Soil papers will be defined to be seditious; and an oath will be required of every voter to support the Constitution of the United States, and aid in the full execution of the Fugitive Slave law. All this my informant assures me has been resolved upon already. How much further the Legislature will go is as yet uncertain. If the emigrants from Northern States submit to these acts of legislation, of course they give up the question of Slavery. If they do not, what will be the result? It must be such as I have herein anticipated." The emigrants from the South are fully determined to execute these acts to the letter, and they are prepared to execute them at a trail. There is reason also to believe that the emigrants from the North are preparing for the sublime ratio. Such are the plain tendencies of things here. They cannot be arrested prior to the next session of Congress. Can they be arrested then? I turn with alarm from the veil of the future, and await with painful solicitude the moment when it shall be raised.

Governor REEDER is now here. He will leave this evening for Kansas. I saw him yesterday—he seemed to be in good spirits. It is nevertheless, extremely doubtful whether he will be permitted to resume the duties of his office without opposition. The Southern portion of the population are deeply exasperated against him, and some of them are determined by an intense personal hatred. Though not indisposition on his part may produce a catastrophe too shocking to think of with composure. Of his personal safety we can only speak with vague hope,—it is impossible to feel any confidence.

Should anything occur of interest, you will be promptly advised. I shall now receive regular information from Kansas. Yours, L.

The Germans-Americans.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The withdrawal of this portion of our population from the political parties with which they would otherwise act, and the formation by them of an independent political body, would be an unfortunate movement for themselves. It would draw upon them the brunt of the battle with the Know-Nothings, who are now more especially engaged with another portion of our foreign-born population. Had there been immigration to these States from Germany alone, the Know-Nothing movement would not have been made, or at least it would not have taken its present shape. It is true that in the Southern States particular stress is laid upon the supposed infidel principles of the Germans and their alleged wild notions of Democracy. But this is explained by the fact that the Germans are generally in favor of UNIVERSAL Freedom. Southern onslaughts upon them will be harmless if unshared by the people of the Northern States, for the Know-Nothings are not likely to have much success at the South. The division of the Know-Nothing parties into Northern and Southern will still further protect the Germans from extreme measures, unless indeed they should arouse the North by throwing down the gauntlet.

Leaving out of view the Southern Know-Nothings, as shorn of power, let us see what principles the Northern American Party are likely to fall back upon—whether known by the old name, or by the new name of Know-Somethings, should the latter branch swallow up the other, as it seems not unlikely it will.

Extension of the term of probation before naturalization will be a cardinal principle, and the Germans, by organizing independently of other political parties, would advance rather than defeat the success of this principle, by arousing many who are now indifferent.

Opposition to the elevation of Papists to office, will be another thing for which the American Party will contend. This is not aimed at the Germans, and will affect them but little. Indeed if they were the only Papists in the country the American Party would not have mooted this question. But this is aimed at those blind devotees of Papacy who acknowledge it as a political power.

Exclusion of the foreign-born from office, will be another vital point in the estimation of the American party. But then it is not proposed to exclude them by operation of law, but only by agreement of the people not to vote for them. There would be but few localities in which this would affect the Germans; for they do not aspire to office, unless it be in particular localities in which they may constitute the main body of the population. In New-York, for instance, the Germans stand in their private pursuits, and do not scramble for office, leaving political offices for the native-born, including their own native-born children. In some of the new States, or in particular localities within them, they may fill the offices; but there can be no objection to that, and the American Party would not prevent it. The objection is to the foreign-born acquiring office by means of divisions of the native-born into parties, and the foreign-born selling out to the party which may bid highest.

The American party will strive to prevent the landing of paupers and criminals upon our shores. The Germans cannot reasonably object to this.

Opposition to the extension of Slavery is shared alike by the Germans and by the body of the American party in the Northern States. This is a very strong bond of union, and will temper the action of the former, unless the former should organize against the American party. The Southern Know-Nothings we consider a mere nullity.

SAM FERRENER.

MONDAY, June 18, 1855.

Aquatic Sports.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I notice in your issue of this morning an article appropriate to the season, concerning the approaching Regatta at Boston, wherein you comment on the anti-aquatic tastes of the greatest maritime City in the world. But it was not always so; once, and not so very long ago either, rowing was a popular amusement, and in the times of the old Castle Garden Boat Club Association, the Garden would be filled as a place for admission to see "the gallant around Bender's island." Latterly the sport has fallen more into obscurity, and now but few, not having friends or relations members, know that "such an institution" exists. Still the Clubs keep up a little excitement among themselves, and this year, I think, have been more than usually active. Almost every bright evening, (and frequently in the afternoon,) one or more boats, with neatly uniformed crews, and sometimes embellished by the presence of ladies, may be seen gliding along the shores of Hoboken, or beneath the rugged heights of the Weehawken Bluffs; every man bending to his oar, until their boats, some of them light and graceful as fairy barks, seem to fly through the water.

A little more encouragement, Mr. Editor, and this noble amusement will again rise in the public esteem, to that place that it should always occupy.

You propose to "ventilate the spirit of young Bowery," you say; but do you not think young Broadway and young Fifth-avenue would also be benefited by a little more exercise? Look at the present race of thin-legged, small-armed, no-chested fashionables, and say whether that class, which, however little it may deserve it, generally have the best facilities for mental and physical improvement, do not need some such discipline as pulling ten or a dozen miles, two or three times a week? Sailing is all very well, and is a very fine healthy amusement; but, although it affords one great thing—plenty of good healthy salt air—it gives no exercise; then the wind is capricious and will die away just when you find yourself a dozen miles from home, and where nothing is eat or drink is to be had. Ball playing is a fine amusement, but nothing is so well calculated to expand the chest and develop the muscles generally as the steady, continuous exercise of rowing. As for regattas for the present season, there are other days quite as suitable for the purpose as the oppressive heat we may expect on the 4th. To pull a stretch of six miles is not such a light work that one would select a very warm day for it, and this Fall may see some regattas in New-York. CHRISTOPHER-STREET.

NEW-YORK, June 21, 1855.

Thorwaldsen's Statue of Christ.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I have to-day seen the Christ by THORWALDSEN in the Crystal Palace. Years since I sat with the sculptor in his studio, and can readily recall the peculiar expression of face of the old man as he so inquiringly turned that gray eye upon me. I feel as though I can hardly be justified in the unfavorable expression of my opinion on this great work of his hand, but I confess it does not pleasure me. It is deficient in unity. The face does not belong to the chest. It is the face rather of the nervous temperament, while the chest is that of the sanguineous. It is, moreover, lean and emaciated, and out of keeping with the other portions of the figure. The arms and legs are rather plump, even, and smooth, and of the lymphatic temperament, and not sustained by the abdomen, which is less prominent than the chest. In the lymphatic temperament, (the temperament of the arms and legs,) the abdominal region should be more prominent than that of the chest. The face is the form of a narrow parallelogram, and too contracted and straight in its lines to express a comprehensive and powerful nature, or even that of moderate love.

There is a fatty projection over the eye which belongs to a well nourished face, and that is believed to indicate a fondness of luxury, both of which are unsustained by the other portions of the face, and out of character with the individual they were intended to represent.

The nose is too contracted at the upper part of the nostrils, indicating a disease of the alimentary system, and belongs to a peevish disposition. It is certainly too narrow and defined for a mild and lovely nature, and more especially too small in the capacity of its nostrils for the sanguineous chest. The mouth is out of character with the other portions of the face and with the arms and legs. The upper line of the upper lip is very curved, and is the line that in this portion of this feature displays itself under the influence of an over sensitive stomach—a condition that manifests anything but a tranquil, mild character. The character of fastfulness indicated in this feature is increased in severity by the sharpness of its termination. The line of the lower jaw is aright, cold and irresolute, and belongs to the lazy beggar—to the prince of beggars, rather than to the prince of kindness—to one who would ask all mankind to die for him rather than himself voluntarily die for all mankind. The hands are too short for the face, and the fingers too uniform in size from one end to the other, for the temperament of the arms. The foot appears much longer than the face, and much too long compared with the short hands and the lymphatic arms. Whatever the world may think of this work, simplex dentaxat veum is violated in the incongruous composition of its different portions.

J. F. G. MITTAG.

NEW-YORK, June 4, 1855.

An American Seaman taken from his ship by the Authorities at Sagua la Grande.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The bark Delewarean on her arrival at Sagua la Grande, had one of her crew taken by the authorities of that place, contrary to the wish of her master. I was informed by Capt. DUNCAN, (of the D.) that this man signed articles on the 16th of May, and reported himself a native of Peru; he shipped for the voyage, but on the arrival of the bark at Sagua, he said he was a Spaniard and produced a passport dated May 18. The Captain showed the authorities that he was one of his crew, lawfully shipped, &c., but they took him away from the vessel. Four days after they came along side again and demanded his clothes. Capt. D. refused to give them up. They then went on board and forcibly took possession of them. This is considered an outrage to the American flag.

JAS. E. COLE, Master of ship Lentell.

Crops, &c., in Mississippi.

Extract of a Business Letter, dated

MISSISSIPPI, June —.

The crops in this State are as luxuriant in this section as ardent lovers of Indian Corn or admirers of plump Cotton bales could wish—the prairie loam being admirably adapted to the cultivation of these great staples of this State. The rains have been abundant during the month, not only benefiting vegetation, but affording us pleasant days and cool, invigorating nights. Murders are of such frequent occurrence in this part of the country, that they cause little or no excitement, while the ruffians who commit them are almost invariably shielded from the law. An atrocious murder was committed on Monday last, in a neighboring town, by a young man, upon the person of an esteemed Professor, much in the WARD and BUTLER style, and with about the same provocation. As soon as the deed was done, the friends of the assassin employed every lawyer in this place, thereby preventing any prosecution until a lawyer could be obtained from a distance—Prosecuting Attorneys being appointed to each Judicial District only. This is but one of many like barbarities enacted by undisciplined and reckless men and youths.

Normal Alumni Association.

The Alumni Association of the State Normal School have their biennial reunion at Albany, on Thursday, July 12, opening at 2 P. M. Addresses by gentlemen from abroad, music and a good time generally, are anticipated. The Association numbers some 500 persons.

NEW-YORK CITY.

ANOTHER MURDER.

A Woman Beaten to Death.

Coroner HILTON held an inquest yesterday on the body of a woman named MARY JANE MCQUADE, who came to her death from alleged brutal treatment at the hands of JACOB MITCHEL, a seaman, who had been living with deceased for the last two months. Although not married, they had passed as man and wife,—he paying for her board. They lodged together at a low groggery kept by THOMAS TURNEY, at No. 22 Jackson-street, in the Seventh Ward. MITCHEL, from the evidence gathered on the Coroner's inquest, was in the habit of beating and kicking her, and otherwise maltreating her. The repeated husband commenced this systematic course of ill-treatment about three weeks ago. She became more addicted to liquor and he became more rough in his treatment. Last Thursday, it is alleged, his treatment, however bad it might have been before, reached to perfect brutality. When he entered the house on that day he kicked her till she became insensible, and then he fled. Deceased lingered till Saturday, when she died from the effects of this ill-treatment. Several witnesses were examined by the Coroner.

JULIA DEAN, who resides at No. 22 Jackson-street, was present when MITCHEL came into the room on Thursday last. She says that he immediately ran up to her and commenced kicking deceased in the left side, near the abdomen. She attempted to escape and fled up stairs for protection, but he followed her. After they had gone up stairs, she heard MITCHEL beat the poor woman, after which there was a heavy fall on the floor. In the morning her face was very much swollen. When asked how her face was so much swollen, she replied that MITCHEL had knocked her down, and beaten her, and jumped upon her with his boots. She complained of great pain in the head. She drank several glasses of liquor on Friday, and seemed to revive; but on Saturday she was taken with convulsions, and died at noon. Deceased, according to his witness, was subject to fits, and had them about two months ago. On Thursday last the beating continued about fifty-five minutes.

Other witnesses were examined, who corroborated the evidence of this witness.

Dr. FENNELL, who made the post-mortem examination, was sworn, and said: I have made a post-mortem examination of the body of deceased; I found her whole person much bruised, and a clot of blood pressing on the right side of the brain; the lungs were much congested; blood was flowing from the mouth and nostrils; the head, face, neck and body were much bruised; both eyes were blackened, the right but slightly; I am of opinion that death was caused by compression of the brain from extravasated blood, the result of injuries received on the head; beating a person about the head in the manner testified to would produce this effect, as would also a fall upon the floor; she had numerous bruises over her body and chest; they appeared to be recent; I think the congestion of the lungs was due to the convulsions.

The case, after a few remarks from the Coroner, was given to the Jury, who rendered their verdict—which was to the effect that deceased came to her death by compression of the brain from effusion of blood, the result of injuries received on the night of the 21st instant, at the hands of JACOB MITCHEL. Deceased was only twenty-four years of age, and a native of Ireland.

A warrant has been issued for the arrest of MITCHEL, but it is supposed he has gone to sea.

City Mortality.

The following is the WEEKLY REPORT OF DEATHS in the City and County of New-York, from the 19th day of June to the 23d day of June, 1855. Men, 42; women, 50; boys, 110; girls, 107—Total, 309. Adults, 92; children, 223; males, 152; females, 157; colored persons, 9.

DISEASES.

Abscess, etc.	1	Diarrhœa	7	Ship fever	1
Bright's dis. of kidneys	1	Dropsy	1	Liver, disease of	1
Asphyxia	1	Dropsy, in head	2	Lock-jaw	1
Asphyxia, still-born	1	Dysentery	1	Lues Venerea	1
Apoplexy	1	Dysentery, bloody	1	Lungs, disease of	1
Apoplexy, lungs	1	Dysentery, chronic	1	Malformation of heart	1
Bronchitis	1	Dysentery, acute	1	Marasmus	1
Burned or scald	1	Dyspepsia	1	Mother's death	1
Cancer	2	Fever, congestive	1	Marasmus, infant	1
Cancer of bowels	1	Fever, puerperal	1	Measles	1
Cancer of stomach	1	Fever, scarlet	1	Mortification	1
Cancer of testicles, liver, &c.	1	Fever, typhoid	3	Old age	1
Convulsions	12	Fever, typhus	1	Palsy	1
Crushed over by a horse	1	Fracture of skull	2	Paralysis	1
Cholera	1	Fracture of ribs	1	Pleurisy	1
Cholera infantum	1	Heart, disease of	1	Pleurisy, chronic	1
Cholera morbus	1	Intemperance	2	Rheumatism	1
Consumption	44	Hooping cough	1	Rheumatism, with lock jaw	1
Consumption, lungs	1	Inflam. of bowels	4	Rupture of liver	1
Consumption, liver	1	Inflam. of brain	1	Scald	1
Congestion, brain	1	Inflam. of lungs	10	Scrofula	1
Congestion, liver	1	Inflam. of lungs, infant	1	Small pox	1
Congestion, lungs	1	Inflam. of stomach	1	Still-born	28
Consumption	30	Inflam. of throat	1	Suffocation, by accident	1
Convulsions, adult	1	Inflam. of kidneys	1	Suicide, by drowning	1
Convulsions, infants	2	Inflam. of water	1	Teething	1
Cancer, penis	1	Jaundice	1	Unknown	1
Croup	1	Kidney, dis. of	1	Vomiting	1
Debility, senile	1	Killed, by falls	1	Vaccinia	1
Debility, infants	2	Killed, by accid.	1
Delirium Tremens	2
Total					309

CONSTITUTIONAL DISEASES.

Boils	1	Children, still-born	28
Brain and nerves	20	Stomach, bowels, and other digestive organs	40
Cancerous organs	1	Uncertain seat, and general fever	32
Heart and blood-vessels	32	Unknown	2
Liver, Thrush, &c.	20	Urinary organs	3
Old Age	1
Skin, &c., and eruptive fevers	42
Total			309

of which 14 were from violent causes.

AGES.—Under 1 year, 108; 1 to 2 years, 50; 2 to 5 years, 41; 5 to 10 years, 10; 10 to 15 years, 6; 15 to 20 years, 6; 20 to 25 years, 19; 25 to 30 years, 18; 30 to 40 years, 33; 40 to 50 years, 10; 50 to 60 years, 12; 60 to 70 years, 1; 70 to 80 years, 7; 80 to 90 years, 2—Total, 309.

NATIVITIES.—England, 7; France, 2; Germany, 13; Ireland, 56; Italy, 1; Scotland, 2; Switzerland, 1; United States, 231; Unknown, 1; West Indies, 1—Total, 309.

PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS.—Bellevue Hospital, 6; City Hospital, 5; Colored Home Hospital, 1; Lunatic Asylum, Blackwell's Island, 2; Penitentiary Hospital, Blackwell's Island, 1; Randall's Island Nursery Hospital, 4; St. Vincent's Hospital, 1; Small-pox Hospital, Blackwell's Island, 1; Ward's Island Emigrant Hospital, 18—Total, 38.

Wards.		Wards.		Wards.
I.	8	IX.	14	XVII.	8
II.	3	X.	15	XVIII.	13
III.	3	XI.	20	XIX.	11
IV.	20	XII.	21	XX.	21
V.	24	XIII.	16	XXI.	8
VI.	17	XIV.	11	XXII.	11
VII.	11	XV.	11		—
VIII.	16	XVI.	9	Total	309

THOMAS E. DOWNING, City Inspector.

CITY INSPECTOR'S OFFICE, New-York, June 22, 1855.

A Disorderly House Broken Up.

JAMES O'ROURKE and his wife CATHERINE were arrested yesterday, charged with keeping a disorderly house in Twenth-fifth street, near Tenth-avenue. A number of lodgers were found on the premises, and also taken into custody. Justice PEARCE, after hearing their case, sent the following persons up to the Island for a couple of months: Mary Johnson, Bridget Connelly, Mary Moran, George Your, Mary A. Williamson, Wm. Doran, Patrick McAvoy. This is justice—sending the men as well as the women, to rusticate for a few months during the warm weather.

Police News.

A SMART FORGER.

AUGUSTUS CASARAN, who was arrested a few days ago on the Directory business, and liberated by some means or another, was rearrested yesterday by Officer Scott, of the Fifteenth Ward, charged with obtaining money by means of forging letters on several influential men in the City.

The complaint was made by WILLIAM ADAMS, of No. 360 Bleecker-street, from whom he obtained $41, by forging a letter on Mr. A. PEARCE, of the Juvenile Asylum, brother to Justice PEARCE. He has tried this dodge on several parties. He never asks for less than $40, alleging, as an excuse, that he had a bill to pay that day, and had forgot all about it. On his person were found letters addressed to several influential individuals, among others, from Mr. ROSE, of the Juvenile Asylum, to P. M. WETMORE; from Mr. BURDSOR, of the Washington Hotel, to Mr. STEWART, liquor merchant, in Murray-street. The accused was committed for examination by Justice PEARCE.

RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS.

LEOPOLD SILBERSTEAN, a German jeweler in the Bowery, was brought before Justice DAVISON on Saturday, charged with purchasing some stolen property, known by him to be such. The property alleged to be stolen was valued at $150. The gold watch was sold by the chief to officer, who received in payment thereof a pair of gold earrings and three dollars in money. The accused was held to answer the charge preferred against him.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY.

Four promising youths named WM. HYNES, MICHAEL FREDERIC, BENJAMIN DURKIN and THOMAS TOURNEY, were arrested on Saturday, charged with robbing JOHN MURPHY, of No. 108 South-street, on the evening of the 22d instant. In his complaint he states that he was going through the Park about 11½ o'clock, intending to go to his residence in Harlem by the Harlem Railroad. When going through the Park he was accosted by five persons at POLLOCK's public house, near the Park. He was a little intoxicated at the time, and did not remember the conversation that ensued, but was brought to his senses by the accused knocking him down, and in the usual mode, abstracting his wallet containing bills and papers to the amount of $8 62. After committing the robbery, the thieves made "tracks," leaving complainant bellowing "watch." A witness testifies to seeing the accused dodge MURPHY into POLLOCK's hotel; heard one of them say to his pal "he will be out soon, he is just putting up his pocket-book;" then saw them follow MURPHY when he left POLLOCK's, and went over to the Hall of Records; and there saw the robbery committed. The accused were committed by Justice BOGART in default of $1,000 bail each, to answer the charge preferred against them.

WRONGFUL ARREST.

DANIEL MCGRATH, a boy seventeen years of age, was found concealed in the parlor of JOHN CONRY, No. 14 Roosevelt-street, with intent to steal. He was committed for trial by Justice BOGART.

At Jefferson Market Police Court a boy about six years of age was brought before Justice PEARCE yesterday morning, charged with attempting to rob a till. A boy about a year older pinched the little thief's cap behind the counter, for the commendable purpose of giving him a chance to steal from the till. The plan, though ingenious, was frustrated. Sent to the Juvenile Asylum.

COMMENCING BUSINESS.

CHARLES GROSBAUER, a grocer, doing business at No. 67 West Twenty-fifth-street, was arrested on Saturday, charged with obtaining a barrel of sperm oil from Mr. D. F. WESTON, No. 349 Maiden-lane, by means of false pretenses. The accused, when he purchased the oil, said that he was about starting a grocery store, and would pay for it when delivered. When the carman brought the oil, accused told him that it was all right; and by this means obtained possession of it. The accused now denies all knowledge of the affair.

LAID UP TWO WAYS.

EDWARD MATTHEWS and WM. CLARK, two alleged hotel thieves, were arrested on Saturday, charged with attempting to steal about $300 worth of property from a lodger in the Cortlandt House. The complainant heard some person attempting to enter the room by aid of a pair of nippers. He immediately got up and gave the alarm, when the police were sent for. Suspicion was fixed on accused, and on searching their room they discovered a pair of nippers under their pillow. There was also marks of the nippers having been applied to the key of room No. 112. When discovered they pretended to be fast asleep. They were brought before Justice DAVISON on Saturday and committed for trial.

KNOW YOUR CUSTOMER.

BARBARA COOK, apparently a domestic, was brought before Justice PEARCE yesterday, charged with obtaining five dress patterns of the value of $112, from TERESA QUALPER, No. 10 White-street, by means of false pretences. The accused, it is alleged, called on the dressmaker and said she was sent by a lady to select a dress, but thought it proper to select several, so that she might oblige the lady. The dresses, without further question, were delivered to accused, who has failed to turn up till yesterday. She was held for exam

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT CALENDAR....MONDAY.

SUPREME COURT—Chambers—Part I.—Nos. 63, 101, 97, 105, 113, 109, 103, 93, 69, 101, 41, 256 to 264. Part II.—Nos. 1097, 99, 23, 105, 239 to 257.

SUPERIOR COURT—Trial Term.—Adjourned to Go-

COMMON PLEAS—General Term.—The argument calendar will be taken up, and two Courts will sit during the week.

SUPREME PLEAS—Appeal cases will be heard.

Decision in the New-York and New-Haven Railroad Cases.

SUPERIOR COURT—GENERAL TERM—June 22.

Before Hon. Judges Oakley, Bosworth, Sandford and Mitchell.

ISSUE UPON THE MARKET VALUE OF THEIR STOCK.

The Mechanics' Bank vs. The New-York and New-Haven Railroad Company.—This case came on at the Saturday Bar. It was argued at Special Term, before Hon. Justice Bosworth, who decided that the statements were false to the plaintiffs for the market value of the shares. From this decision the defendants appealed to the General Term. There it was argued at some length on both sides, Messrs. Van Winkle and Daniel Lord for the plaintiffs, and Messrs. Wm. C. Bryant, George Wood and Charles Tracy, for the defendants.

The facts of the case are sufficiently stated in the opinion of the Court, rendered by Sandford, Justice.—The plaintiffs claim to recover, as the holders of the certificates pledged with them by Kyle, the par value of the stock, as damages for the refusal of the defendants to permit a transfer of it on their books, whereby, as they allege, the certificates is rendered unavailable and valueless in their hands. That the certificate did not represent genuine stock, but that the stock limited by the charter was full and in the hands of bona fide holders, is admitted, and it is also conceded that it was issued for an unlawful purpose, and that the act or issuing it was a fraud on the part of Schuyler, and that it was issued for his own private benefit. The plaintiffs do not claim that it was competent for the defendants, by their own act, or by the act of their transfer agent, to increase the amount of their original capital, or to create new shares into which it was divided; nor do they ascribe to this certificate any such effect, but claim that the defendants were bound to, or had a right to issue a genuine certificate in exchange for this spurious one, if doing so would cause the stock to exceed the legal limits; and they therefore concede that the defendants had a right to refuse to do this, and were not bound to admit them as partners, to change the owners provision as to capital, or the par value of shares; and in the view which I have taken of this case, I shall assume that this position is the sound one; but they claim that for this refusal the defendants have become liable to make to them pecuniary compensation for their loss, precisely as they would have been obliged to do if the stock had been genuine. (Dunn vs. Manhattan Company, 2 Hill, 239; Commercial Bank, Buffalo, vs. Kortright, 22 Wend., 348.)

The theory of the action is, that the defendants are bound by the act of Schuyler, in issuing this certificate, though it was an abuse of his powers and a mere fraud on his part, and that the plaintiffs are entitled, as holders thereof and by virtue of its terms, to be admitted as shareholders, or if that be impracticable, as creating an excess of capital, that they are entitled to pecuniary indemnity from the defendants, for being deprived of a right which the certificate on its face confers upon them.

It is not in form an action to recover damages against the Company, on the alleged ground that their agent in the course of his business, as such, had committed a fraud by which the plaintiffs have been injured, and for the commission of which fraud the defendants ought to respond, but it rests on the assumption that the Company is, under the circumstances, bound in law by the act, as though it had been their own, notwithstanding it was an act in abuse of the powers of the agent, and which the Company itself could not rightfully have done, and the question proposed by the action is, whether the defendants can be bound in favor of a party dealing bona fide with their transfer agent, (which the plaintiffs confessedly were,) by an act of his, which the Company itself could not rightfully have performed, nor rightfully authorized to him the power to perform, but which he has in fact performed, while acting in the discharge of his office as transfer agent, for the performance of which he had general powers, and within the apparent limits of his duties.

To make out a right of recovery in this action on the issue as made by the plaintiffs, it is incumbent on the plaintiffs to establish the affirmative of this proposition.

It is a question the solution of which depends after all on the correct application of a few simple and familiar principles, and were it not for the adventitious importance attached to it from the stupendous magnitude of the general fraud, of which the case of Mer forms but an inconsiderable part, and from the vast pecuniary interests to be affected by the decision, it would not, in my apprehension, be considered by the Profession as a question of very extraordinary difficulty. That the Company itself could not, without the sanction of the Legislature, have under the circumstances rightfully issued this certificate, creating it as the representative of stock; that it could not have issued it without an excess of their lawful powers under their charter, may be conceded, but it is nevertheless true that they had the power in fact to do the act, as one coming within the range of their corporate powers, though in the particular instance it may be unlawful in itself as contravening the policy of their charter.

It is in capacity in fact to do the act, under the powers conferred upon it by the charter, which, in relation to third parties, becomes of essential importance in determining the obligation of the Corporation.

Let it be supposed that this Company had never employed a transfer agent at all, but that all its certificates were issued by the direct action of the Board itself, and that the one in question had been issued under a resolution of the Board and with the corporate seal affixed, though the act, in so far as it could operate to create new stock, or give to the purchaser the rights of a shareholder, might be a clear abuse of the corporate powers of the Company, and void, can it be doubted that, in favor of a bona fide holder of the note, who has parted with value on the faith of it, the act would be binding on the corporation, and entitle the holder at least to an indemnity at their hands? The act, though a fraud on the charter, would not be a nullity, nor necessarily void. It would still be a corporate act, which the defendants would be estopped from denying as against an innocent party who had dealt on the faith of it. It is true that in certain cases a corporation is not estopped from denying that an act upon which a claim against it was founded was unauthorized and illegal, but the rule has no application to a case like the present. (Talmage vs. Pell, 3 Seldon, 328.) It applies where the corporation has done an act in clear excess or in violation of its charter or legal powers, and that is a transaction in which the party with whom it has dealt has notice or knowledge of the illegality of the act.

It is true, too, that it does not perceive in what respect the authority by being done by the agent of the corporation is being conceded that such agent had full power in that particular business and that the act was done within ostensibly within the limits and in the performance of his legitimate duties.

As Transfer Agent, the powers of Schuyler were as large in respect to the keeping of the books and the issuing of stock certificates in the City of New-York as were those of the Board of Directors itself. The whole duty was devolved upon him, and every act done by him within the scope of that duty was in judgment of law an act of the Board itself.

Nor does this conflict with the rule that where the agent exceeds or abuses his powers the principal has the right to repudiate his acts and hold him responsible for the consequences of his conduct, since that is a right which exists between himself and his servant only, and which in no way affects the rights of strangers as against either.

As transfer clerk, Schuyler stood in the position of a general agent, and he of an agent entrusted with the entire business of that department under the rules prescribed by the by-laws and regulations of the Board of Directors. He was held out in this capacity to the world, and in the business of transfer of the stock of the company, the public dealt with him and him only. Within the limits of that employment the public had the right to regard all acts done by him as rightfully done, so long as they had no reason to suspect to the contrary. While acting within these limits, and in his character of transfer agent, and in the performance of that very business, his acts were binding on the company, without showing their assent or participation. (Parsons on Contracts p. 41-42; Story Ag. sec. 423; 15 East. R. p. 62).

There would be no safety otherwise in dealing with corporations, as private individuals acting by the agency of others. This rule applies as well to acts done in fraud of the rights of the principal, as to those rightfully done, otherwise there would be no benefit in the rule itself.

It is a rule founded in the common sense of right in practice, and adopted as fundamental because in itself right and necessary for the protection of the innocent.

It is true, the party who claims the benefit of it must be himself not only in fact but in contemplation of law free from any participation in the fraud of the agent, that is, he must neither be a party directly participant in the fraud, nor have closed polies of it, nor be put upon inquiry by the suspicious character of the transaction, but these conditions being found his security is perfect.

There is no pretence that the plaintiffs have had actual knowledge of the fraudulent conduct of Schuyler, nor was there anything in the transaction to put them on inquiry. It was the ordinary transaction of a loan upon stock security with the usual assignment and power to effect a transfer, and in no respect different either in the character of the papers or of the transaction itself from probably a hundred similar cases transacted in the street in the same stock and on that very day.

But it is said the plaintiffs should have investigated the title to the stock before they advanced their money—that they should have ascertained by a resort to the books or by inquiry at the office whether the statement in the certificate was true and whether this certificate was issued upon a surrender of a former certificate representing actual stock in compliance with the regulations and by-laws of the Board, and it is contended that if they were invited to this investigation by the seeming facts of the case, and that the means of information were in the power of the party, and are therefore chargeable with the position of parties entitled to the benefit of the rule.

It is a sufficient answer to this objection to say, that the finding at the Special Term establishes that "the plaintiffs made the loan in good faith, and had no reason when they received the certificate to suppose it was not genuine;" but it may be added that regulations in respect to the transfer of shares upon the books of the Company made by the Board, under the authority of the charter, are provisions intended for the security and benefit of the Company itself in the payment of its dividends, and in determining who are entitled to vote at the election of its officers, and for the purpose of ascertaining the parties liable for the assessments imposed on shares. The title to the stock as between the seller and buyer, is not affected by these provisions, and the purchaser has a right to assume that the certificate represents actual stock, and that the Company, whose business it is, has done its duty, in seeing that the old certificate has been duly surrendered before the issuing of the new. (Case of Bank of Kentucky, 1 Parsons' Select Eq. Cases, 247; Bank of United vs. Smalley, 2 Cowen, 770; Bank of Buffalo vs. Kortright, 22 Wend., p. 348.)

Moreover, no person other than a stockholder has any legal right to an inspection of the books, and might properly be denied the privilege, if asked for.

Neither would the books be higher evidence of title than the certificate itself, since both are under the supervision and control of the same officer, and if the purchaser has no right to rely upon the stock be in fact genuine, it would be necessary to trace it to its source, a matter of great difficulty, if not in many instances impracticable.

It may be conceded for the purpose of this argument, though the case does not find that fact, that the books would have shown 85 shares of the stock to be standing in the name of Kyle. Had the plaintiffs been permitted to inspect the books, and have discovered this fact, would they have been more protected than they are now?

What higher authority as evidence of title would the entry on the book made by the same agent who made the certificate, and under the same authority, have than the certificate itself; and if the Company would be estopped by an entry on the books, which it has been held they would be, (21 Vermont R., 353; Angel & Ames, sec. 306,) why is it not, equally so by the certificate itself?

To require such an investigation in every instance of the transfer of stock, would be introducing a rule of inconvenience utterly at war with the necessities of business, and destructive of all transactions in stock, as well as ruinous to the value of that species of property.

I have spoken of Schuyler as having authority to make these certificates. The judgment at the Special Term does not find this as a fact, the by-laws being silent on this point; but the answer of the defendants admits that he was the duly appointed transfer agent of the Company, and as such had charge of the transfer books and the right to issue certificates upon a transfer made by a real owner of the stock.

This admission is all that is necessary to the present question—the qualification thus put upon the power in the pleading being only the construction given by the defendants themselves as to the cases in which it might be rightfully exercised.

There is no distinction in the application of the principles to which I have referred, between the case of a corporation and that of an individual. Both are equally liable for the frauds of their agents committed in the course of their employment. (Ang. & Ames on Corp. sec. 308, p. 23; Com. R., 320; Goodyear vs. E. Haddam Bank; Story on Ag. sec. 308.)

By holding him out to the world as clothed with a certain authority, and inviting the trust and confidence of the community to him in such capacity, the principal in effect undertakes with all who deal with him in good faith, that his acts are rightfully done, and that he will stand by the innocent dealer and see him protected. (1 Parsons' Select Eq. Cases, at p. 248.)

The act of the agent will be treated at the election of the injured party as the act of the principal, for which he is liable, and not as that of the agent individually, for which he alone would be responsible.

The fact that the act is one which defrauds the principal himself, and is a gross abuse of the agent's powers, and is done without the assent of the principal or even his knowledge, or against his express commands not communicated to the party dealing with him, makes no difference in the application of the principle, which has its foundations in the very necessities of justice as between men. (Story on Agency, sec. 459; Fuller vs. Essex Bank, 17 Mass., 507.)

It is true that this act of Schuyler was one never contemplated in his appointment, nor was he appointed to do what his principals could not rightfully do, but that makes no difference in the application of the principle. He was employed to do lawful and proper acts, as all agents are in contemplation of law, and it was in the execution of the powers of that lawful employment, and in doing an act which upon its face in itself was lawful and within the express limits of his powers, and an act of the very description of those which he was appointed to do, that he committed the fraud.

To allow the principal to escape responsibility upon a distinction of this kind, would be effectually to shield him in every instance of an abuse of power on the part of his agent.

The case is totally unlike that class of cases in which a corporation undertakes to do what it is prohibited from doing by law or by its charter, and has therefore no legal capacity to do, or to that class of cases in which an agent, though acting at the time in the master's employment, undertakes to do an act wholly unconnected with that employment or the business of his agency, and for which he alone is responsible; but it is the case of an abuse of a lawful power by an agent, lawfully appointed by a principal authorized so to appoint, and in the exercise of this very lawful authority, and in the very terms and within the very limits of his powers and according to the custom of his office. (Vanderbilt vs. Richmond Turnpike Company, 2 Comn., 479.)

A case cannot be conceived in which it would be more difficult for parties dealing with the agent to discover a fraud, or in which they would be less put upon inquiry by anything calculated to excite suspicion.

To allow the principal to escape responsibility on the ground that the agent had, by committing such a fraud, exceeded the powers of his appointment, or done what he was never appointed to do, would be effectually to shield him in every instance of an abuse of power on the part of his agent.

I consider the action as virtually upon the certificate, and that that instrument creates a binding obligation on the defendants, which they are precluded from denying, as against these plaintiffs, to be their act—the same having been created by their lawfully constituted agent, within the scope of his legitimate powers, and in the very exercise of them, though in abuse of them; and that though the defendants may not be able, by reason of the limitations imposed by their charter upon the amount of their capital and number of their shares, to admit the plaintiffs to the rights of stockholders, by permitting a transfer of this stock upon their books, they are not, on that account, at liberty to repudiate the act as the act of the corporation, but must make compensation to the innocent holders of the certificates equally as an individual who has undertaken to do an act which he finds himself unable to perform, and whose default in performance has caused an injury to another, would be bound to do.

The rule of damage in such a case is the damage actually sustained by the fraudulent act, which in this instance would be the amount loaned on the credit of the certificate; and as that largely exceeds even the par value of the stock, the rule adopted by the Special Term cannot be objected to.

The judgment at the Special Term should be affirmed.

An able and elaborate opinion was rendered by Hon. Justice HOFFMAN, of which we give the following abstract:

The results which I have arrived at, and have endeavored in this opinion to sustain, may be embodied in the following propositions:

1. It is impossible for me to conceive any ground upon which any responsibility can be fixed upon the Company which will not depend upon or arise out of the certificate issued to Kyle, and deposited with the plaintiffs. That certificate was either a contract made by the Company, through its agent, or a representation of an agent, that the facts stated were true, or a guaranty by the Company, that Schuyler's representations in it were true, and an agreement to fulfill them. Interpret it in any manner whatever, it has the element of a contract—a declaration that Kyle was entitled to an interest in the Stock, and an engagement to permit a transfer and admission, upon compliance with certain terms. In my judgment, then, this action is founded upon the certificate, and such certificate comprises a contract. The action, therefore, rests on contract. There is not in the complaint anything at variance with this view.

2. That this contract contains three material particulars. First—That Kyle was entitled to eighty-five shares of the stock Company. Second—That the capital stock was three millions of dollars. Third—That the nominal amount of each share was one hundred dollars. Fourth—And that upon the production of that certificate a transfer should be permitted to the holder upon the books of the Company. That such a contract would be literally, fully and legally performed by the Company allowing the transfer to the plaintiffs on the books—admitting them to the rights of voting and all the other privileges of corporators under the charter—and by recognizing the fact that the interest and share of the plaintiffs in the capital and property of the Company was eight thousand five hundred dollars out of three millions of dollars. That all the genuine shares be reduced by a rate or per centage which would yield this sum. That this was the import, and this the extent of the obligation fixed upon the Company, in favor of the plaintiffs, by the possession of the certificate in question; and that irrespective of any prohibition, expressed or implied, in the charter or any statute, the stockholders could have entered into such an engagement and bound themselves by it. That had the defendants fulfilled such contract and admitted the plaintiffs to a transfer on the books as demanded, it would have been the duty of the directors to have ascertained the shares of genuine stock and its holders, and to have adjusted the proportion of the interests of the latter in the stock of the company, by abating from each share a rate or per centage which would amount to the sum of eight thousand five hundred dollars; and which, if this were the only case, would be about twenty-eight cents and a fraction upon each share. That if the directors refused or neglected this, the plaintiffs could have filed a complaint (and as the facts exist on behalf of themselves and all others similarly situated) to compel it. If the proportion of the spurious stock to three millions admitted it; if, for example, there was one million five hundred thousand dollars of such stock, as stated in the answer, a surrender of one-half of the shares of each genuine holder, and taking new certificates for half, would effect the object. But if this method should not be practicable, or be inconvenient, then an abatement of the nominal value of each share by a rate or per centage sufficient to cover the amount of the spurious stock would be practical and effectual. That there is not sufficient ground to suppose that a discrimination of the stock cannot be made so as to carry out this method of doing justice to all. That in relation to the effect and operation of the charter, it is not to be conceded that the increase of the number of shareholders, for the purpose of voting or participating in the corporate privileges, would work a forfeiture, or be at strife with the essential objects of the charter, and that if these holders of certificates were admitted upon a basis fair to the interest of their interest, which should leave the capital practically the same, the ends of public policy, which dictates a limitation of capital would not be invaded, and the act would not be unlawful. And lastly, that this was a question for the State of Connecticut, as the Creator of this State, to determine, and for them alone. That it could not form a just ground for determining the question between these plaintiffs and the holders of genuine stock.

3. That Robert Schuyler had received from the stockholders such an apparent unlimited power as enabled him to bind the stockholders to perform the stipulations contained in this certificate, although falsely and fraudulently issued by him, provided the claim upon such certificate is asserted by a bona fide holder.

4. That there is no evidence to show that Kyle was aware of the fraud attending the issue of the stock, or that he had not stock to his credit in the books. That although, as between himself and the Company, the possession of the certificate before it was pledged gave no right to Kyle, yet, after the pledge to the plaintiffs, he had an equitable lien upon it, to secure him against responsibility on this note, and would have had a full right to it, had he paid such note. And that even if such certificate was of no avail in the hands of Kyle, the rights of the plaintiffs under it, being bona fide holders, would not be affected by anything which would have rendered it ineffectual in the hands of Kyle.

5. That the extent, force and nature of the obligation imposed upon the Company was such as before stated, and no other. That without a demand and refusal to permit a transfer, no possible right of action would vest in the plaintiffs. Had the transfer been allowed, and the pecuniary interests adjusted upon the principle stated, all claim of the plaintiffs would have been satisfied. And hence that compensation in damages is to be given exclusively on account of the refusal, and on no other ground whatever. That under the circumstances of the present case, the Court is not at liberty to carry out what appears the true and equitable relief, by decreeing a performance of the contract thus interpreted, and that the only measure of damages which the case, as presented, admits of, is the market value of the stock as it has been found; and hence, that the judgment must be affirmed.

Hon. Justice BOSWORTH concurred in the opinion of the Court, and stated the following as his reasons:

1. That in issuing the certificate, Schuyler was acting within the scope of his powers as transfer agent, and the issuing of it was, in judgment of law, the act of the Corporation.

2. That by entrusting to him that department of business, and holding him out to the world as the officer by whom the company would transact it, it represented his official acts to be entitled to credit, and became responsible for his fidelity in that employment.

3. That any person to whom certificates of stock, issued by such officer in the usual form, and authenticated by him in the usual manner, are offered for sale, is, through them, assured by the company, that the facts are as they represent them to be, and is as much authorized to purchase, relying on the truth of that representation, as a merchant is to sell upon the representation of a third person, that the vendee is worthy of credit.

4. That a purchaser in good faith, for value, and in the ordinary course of business, of such a certificate, although it proves to have been fraudulently issued, is entitled to have his damages of the company, if they refuse to permit of a transfer of the stock, or to reimburse to the purchaser any part of his advance, and that he cannot be charged with having been negligent, or with a want of due caution, for having trusted to the certificate of the proper officer, without further inquiry, when there was nothing in the circumstances under which it was offered to him, or relating to the person offering it, or to the amount of the stock so offered, justly calculated to excite the suspicion of a prudent and cautious man, that the officer of the company had departed from his duty in issuing, or that the holder had been guilty of any improper practice in obtaining it.

OAKLEY, C. J., delivered an opinion orally, substantially as follows:

I might almost say, without any disrespect to the counsel who were engaged in this case, that it has been too much argued. The diversity of legal opinion which has been elicited in the matter is such as might lead some people to suppose that there exists hardly any recognized principle of law by which it can be rightly disposed of.

The facts on which the questions now under decision have arisen, have been so repeatedly stated that they must be thoroughly understood, and it is not necessary now to repeat any of them, except so far as may be necessary to illustrate any general remarks that may be made.

The defendants in this case are sought to be charged and held liable by virtue of the acts of Schuyler, who was said to be their agent. It becomes important, then, to inquire in the first place, what was the character of that agency. I considered him to have been a general agent, as it has been properly expressed, for particular business. That is, he had general powers to superintend the transfer of stock; but he was also certainly an agent, acting under special powers and directions, and special limitations of authority. He was thus like a general agent appointed to do generally any act appertaining to a particular business; but at the same time limited in the performance of that power by the laws of the Company, which provided that the stock should be transferred only on the books of the Company. The evident effect of that was that the title of a party claiming stock should depend upon the nature of the transfer, so far as legal title was concerned. The By-laws say that that transfer shall not be made by any transfer agent except under certain circumstances; that is, that it shall not be made unless there is a certificate of stock surrendered at the time; the whole substance of the provision being that no one can legally convey or authorize to be conveyed any stock, unless there shall be a surrender of stock at the same time.

Now it cannot be denied that if the plaintiffs in this case were apprised of the fact that this certificate of Schuyler was issued when there was no surrender made, no one could with any legal propriety claim that the Company were bound by such issue. If the transfer were made in good faith, and if these certificates could be considered as a contract, I should hesitate before rendering an opinion that the party making this contract with Mr. Schuyler, being bound, as I shall hold him to be, by a knowledge of the charter, and of the by-laws made under it, (for it was that which constituted the right of the agent to act,)—being bound by that knowledge, I should hesitate to hold that the contract was binding on the Company, if there was no stock sold at the time of issue. Because I think it is a sound principle of law, that if a party has any knowledge of any limitation of the agent's power by the principal, and he chooses to act through that agent without inquiring whether the agent is acting within the scope of that limited authority, he acts at his own peril, and if injury follows, he cannot recover. The question of most importance, then, is whether this is a contract which would be sufficient cause for an action? What is this paper? By what authority was it made? It is somewhat remarkable that in the case as it comes before the Court, there is no power shown to have been given by this Company to Mr. Schuyler to sign this certificate—that is, no express power; and there was no evidence of any power except what was derived from the fact that Mr. Schuyler had been in the habit of issuing these certificate as transfer agent, and that the certificates was in the same form as if had been the custom to issue. The power, therefore, was inferential merely. There was no grant of it. Now, as transfer agent simply, Schuyler had no authority to sign this. It is no part of the business of a transfer agent to issue certificates of stock. His business is to attend to the transfer of stock, in the only way which the charter and by-laws prescribe—that is, by the books of the company. It is to see that the stock be surrendered, and see that it is properly transferred, either by power of attorney or in person, to the stockholder, and that proper entries be made upon the books. When that is done, his power as transfer agent ceases. The power to issue stock results either from some direct authority of the company—which has been intimated to exist, but which does not appear before the Court—or is derived from the practice adopted by the company, of permitting Schuyler to issue these certificates. I do not, therefore, rest my opinion upon the notion that here has been a contract upon which any action could be sustained. There is not, in my judgment, any contract here which, upon any consideration, any Court would ever order to be specifically performed.

In the case of a proceeding directly against this Company for the purpose of compelling a specific performance, the answer of the Company would be, "It is a thing we cannot do; there is no such stock in existence." It seems to me that it is impossible to rest our judgment upon the idea that here is a violation of a contract.

But laying aside the question whether or not there is here a contract which the Company can be bound by, the question arises whether, if the Company authorized Schuyler to represent to the world that Mr. Kyle, for instance, was the owner of stock standing in his name upon the books of the Company, as it was, thus showing that the declaration of the Company was made through Schuyler, by authorization, that circumstance was sufficient to hold the company. And although the certificate might not be the evidence of title, it is doubtful whether the parties could go to the books and show their title by showing the fact of the transfer. The question still remains whether, Schuyler having issued the certificate and having gone to the plaintiffs in this case, and tried to borrow money of them and obtain credit of them, they had a right to rely on the terms of that representation, so far as their action in the matter was concerned. If this representation had been made directly by the Company without the intervention of this agent,—if it had turned out that they had done so by mistake, and if any person had relied upon that representation, and had called upon the Company to carry out the terms of the contract to which they had thus assented, I do not see any means by which they could escape.

Now in this case there is no room for discussion in my mind at all as to what the duties of these plaintiffs might possibly have been. There is no allegation in this case that there was any thing here to put these parties on inquiry as to the acts of Schuyler. The plaintiffs relied, as it seems to me they had a right to rely, on these representations of fact, intended to bear witness to the world that the party owning such a paper was entitled to stock, and they acted, as I think they had a right to act, on that representation. Fraud, as the facts were found in this case, existed, and it would be a narrow view of the matter to contend that because the declaration did not claim damages, therefore the case, in this aspect of it, could not be entertained. I suppose that if the fact had been that the money advanced by these plaintiffs was less than the amount of this stock, they could not be permitted to recover anything more than the amount of their loss. If the certificate gave title, it would have been otherwise, and they would have been legally entitled in recovering the whole value of the stock, without regard to the value of the loss.

The order of the Court is, that the judgment at Special Term should be affirmed.

NEW-YORK SUPERIOR COURT—MAY 23.

JUDGE CAMPBELL'S OPINION, DISSENTING FROM THAT OF THE OTHER JUDGES.

The President, Directors and Company of the Mechanics' Bank of the City of New-York vs. The New-Haven Railroad Company.—CAMPBELL, J.—Differing with my brethren in the results at which they have arrived, I shall proceed not without diffidence, but at the same time with a strong conviction of their correctness, to state, though very briefly, the conclusions to which my mind has arrived. My conclusions are as follows:

1. The capital stock of the corporation could not be enlarged by any act of the Directors or Stockholders themselves; much less by any unauthorized act of the Agent, Schuyler. The corporation is itself a creature of law, authorized by the supreme government of the State, and can only be enlarged by the power which created it.

2. The Agent, Schuyler, acted under a general power, but such power was limited to the subject matter; namely, the stock standing on the transfer books in the City of New-York.

3. The claim of the plaintiffs is not founded directly and exclusively upon any contract to pay money, and is not like the case of a fraudulent over-issue of bank notes by the officers of a corporation for the benefit of such officers, and where the suit would be directly upon the notes themselves.

4. This action if maintainable must be so on the ground of fraud, not the fraud of the agent, but the fraud of the principal. (The principal, though liable for the acts of the agent when within the scope of his general authority, is not liable for such acts when fraudulently or maliciously done, except in the case where the action is founded on the issue of over-issue of bank notes directly upon the instrument or contract put forth by the agent in the name of his principal, or in cases where the agent is entrusted with blank endorsements or signatures of the principal and issues promissory notes fraudulently for his own use. In that class of cases the principal when defrauded by his agent, such agent acting within the scope of his general authority, cannot be permitted to set up by way of defence to the contract which the agent has made the fraud which such agent has committed against the principal. In cases where the action is founded directly upon the instrument or contract which the agent has made in the name of his principal the fraud is committed against the principal, and he must suffer from his misplaced confidence. Under this head come in the exceptional cases to the general rule, that the principal is not liable in any way for the crimes and frauds of his agent. When, however, the action is not directly upon the contract which the agent has made for his principal, when the principal can only be reached by establishing the fraud of the agent, then, I apprehend, the general rule applies.

The action at law, I respectfully submit, is not brought upon the certificate of stock,—that is to recover what the certificate calls for. Kyle was not the owner of any such stock, nor had the defendants at the date of the certificate, nor has it now, any such stock to hand over to the plaintiff.

The certificate had the genuine name of the transfer agent affixed, but it was, notwithstanding, a cheat and a lie. The action is not brought to recover what the certificate calls for, namely, so many shares of stock, but is brought to recover the money obtained from the plaintiff by the use of this false token. The certificate was itself the fraudulent representation which the agent made, and by means of which he procured the money. For the money procured by the agent by those false representations, the agent himself is personally liable.

To make the principal liable also, the fraud of the agent must be brought home and charged directly upon the principal. Under the old system of pleading, if a special action on the case has been brought against this defendant to recover the money claimed in this suit, it seems to me it would have been necessary to have averred direct fraud against the defendant in order to sustain the declaration. It would have been necessary to have averred that the defendant, not the agent, obtained the money by a false token or false representation.

It has been repeatedly held that the owner of a vessel is not responsible under false bills of lading, which are instruments to a certain extent negotiable and transferable.

When the holder of such false bill of lading calls upon the owner for the goods—as in this case the holder of the certificate calls for the stock—the owner of the vessel may say: True, the Captain was my general agent to manage the affairs of the vessel; it was his right and his duty to give bills of lading for all goods shipped on board; the instrument you present has his genuine signature affixed; but there were no such goods ever put on board my ship; your bill of lading is a cheat and a lie.

In those cases the principal was not held liable for the fraudulent acts of his agent. It seems to me, therefore, as before shown, that the principle to be fairly deduced from all the leading cases is this—that where the action is founded directly and exclusively upon the contract or instrument which the agent has made or executed in the name of his principal, acting within the scope of his general authority—the contract being one which it is competent for the principal to fulfill, that the principal may be bound, even though the agent has exceeded his authority, and as regards his principal, has been guilty of a fraud. That on the other hand, when the agent has practiced a fraud upon third parties, and when the right to recover is sought to be established substantially, no matter how the pleadings are framed, by the proof of that fraud, and where false bills of lading, false certificates of stock and other false instruments are given in evidence for that purpose, then, though the agent may have availed himself of his position as master of the vessel or transfer agent, or in some other post of trust and confidence, to commit such fraud upon third parties, the agent alone, and not the principal, is liable.

In my opinion the plaintiff is not entitled to recover, and the judgment of the Special Term should be reversed.

The Slave Trade.

U. S. DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S OFFICE.

Jeromino Hermes was arrested and held to bail in $20,000, for bringing a negro from the Coast of Africa to this port, and from thence transporting him to Washington, N. C., and selling him as a slave.

More Men for the Crimea.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL'S OFFICE.

On Saturday night two of the Deputy Marshals, Nevin and Holmes, arrested three gentlemen who stands charged with enlisting men for the service of the British Government in violation of the laws of the United States. The names of the accused are Baron Frederick R. M. Von Carstenan, a Captain in the English service in Canada, Count De Bougard, formerly a General in the French service under Napoleon, Mr. Maximilian Augustus Thoman, and Lieutenant Peter Jorgensen of the English army. They gave bail in $1,000 each to meet the charge, and were released. Mr. Parker Jones, of the Astor House, was there surety.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM—June 22.

Before Justice Morris.

DECISIONS.

Livingston et al. vs. Reynolds et al.—Motion granted. Inquest set aside and cause restored to special calendar for Friday, 29th, upon defendants paying cost of inquest, and $5 costs of this motion.

Tompkins vs. Tyson.—Order granted.

Sumner et al. vs. Dumber.—Attachment discharged, with $10 costs of this motion.

Morton vs. Church.—Motion granted, with $10 costs of this motion.

In re Hunt.—Order granted.

The People vs. Bishop et al.—Order granted.

Travis vs. Page.—Order of 12th March vacated, with $10 costs of this motion to the defendant.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.—June 23.

Before Hon. Justice Morris.

DECISIONS.

The People ex rel. Willis vs. Guest et al.—Motion dismissed, with leave to renew unless Mr. Willis serve amended affidavit, supplying the defects, upon the counsel for defendants on or before Tuesday next, with motion to renew.

Thompson vs. Murford et al.—Order that the creditors of judgment debtor pay over, refused, &c.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Campbell.

Griswold vs. Finele.—The Jury in this case brought in a verdict on Saturday morning for the plaintiff, assessing the damages at $1,000.

Lazee vs. Sloat.—Judgment of Court below affirmed, with costs.

Strong vs. Stephens.—Order appealed from affirmed, with costs.

COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Judge Ingraham.

DECISIONS.

Reuben O. Skinner and Bernard L. Smyth vs. James Dunbar.—Judgment for plaintiff for the amount admitted to be due by the answer, and, as to the residue of the plaintiff's demand, that it be referred to Moses D. Manley as sole referee, to hear and determine the same.

Henry J. Bevins vs. The Mayor, &c.—Nonsuit set aside and vacated, and cause referred to John D. Burchard, Esq.

Robert McCaffray vs. John W. Latson.—Motion to vacate the appeal in this action granted.

John R. Richards vs. Thomas B. Allen.—Ordered that judgment be given for defendant, unless plaintiff proceed to trial before Michael Ulshoeffer, Esq., the referee duly appointed in this action.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS—JUNE 23.

Before Hon. Judge Stuart.

The June term of this Court closed to-day. Nothing of importance was transacted. In the case of John C. Naylor, tried on Friday for perjury, in representing himself before Justice Welsh, of the Essex Market Police Court, as adequate bail for Thomas Harris, charged with petit larceny, and also swearing that his name was John Clancey, the Jury brought in a verdict of guilty, with recommendation to the mercy of the Court. Judgment was suspended till the next term.

Wm. J. Clarson plead guilty to grand larceny in having stolen on the 2d of last May two hogsheads of sugar, of the value of $108, from Thomas T. Stagger, No. 6 South-street. Remanded for sentence.

Michael Flynn was placed at the bar charged with stealing from Charles Sands, No. 310 Twelfth-street, on the 14th of last March, a bag of oats. No witness appearing against him he was discharged.

A few cases of motion to discharge upon bail were now heard by his Honor the Judge and passed upon, when the Court adjourned for the term.

The calendar for next term meanwhile is light, no causes of special interest being entered for that interim.

Another American Platform.

The "American Party of Washington County, Penn.," held a public meeting on the 16th, and adopted the following Platform, which was recommended to the State Council:

1. The unlimited Freedom of Religion, disconnected with politics—hostility to ecclesiastical influences upon the affairs of Government—equality of rights to all naturalized emigrants who are thoroughly Americanized, and owe no temporal allegations, by reason of their religion, higher than that to the Constitution.

2. No interference with the rights of citizenship already acquired by foreigners, and the protection of law to all who honestly emigrate from love of liberty; but the exclusion of foreign paupers and felons, and a refusal to extend the right of suffrage to all who come hereafter, until they shall have resided from ten to twenty-one years in the United States, and complied with the Naturalization Laws.

3. Opposition to all political organizations composed exclusively of foreigners, and to foreign military companies, and to all attempts to exclude the Bible from Schools supported by the Government.

4. Slavery is local—not national—and we oppose its extension in any of our territories, and the increase of its political power by the admission into the Union of any slave State or otherwise; and we demand of the General Government an immediate redress of the great wrongs which have been inflicted upon the cause of Freedom and the American character by the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, and the introduction of slavery into Kansas in violation of law, by the force of arms, and the destruction of the elective franchise.

5. In humble imitation of the wisdom of WASHINGTON, we oppose all intervention in the affairs of foreign States; yet on all proper occasions, we will not withhold our sympathy from any people aspiring to be free.

6. We support American Industry and genius against the adverse policy of Foreign nations and facilities to internal and external commerce by the improvement of Rivers and Harbors, and the construction of National Roads uniting the various sections of the Union.

7. The union of these States should be made perpetual by a faithful allegiance to the Constitution.

8. In State policy we zealously advocate Retrenchment and Reform, and are in favor of biennial Sessions of the Legislature, believing that we have too much legislation, and as a consequence too much taxation.

EXCITING ADVENTURE WITH A BEAR.—An encounter of an exciting and dangerous character, with a bear, occurred on the 10th inst., near Wellsville, in Allegheny County. Mr. FRANCIS SMITH, a young man residing in that vicinity, being in the woods with his gun, shot a fawn. After loading his piece, he proceeded a few rods, till, on climbing over a large log in a windfall, he chanced to rouse a large bear which had been quietly sleeping on the other side. Bruin being thus unceremoniously disturbed, sprang upon Mr. S. and caught him around the waist. The embrace thus given was considerably more strenuous than welcome. The enraged brute would doubtless have made short work with Mr. S., who is a person of small size, weighing only 105 pounds, but for the promptitude and presence of mind which he was able to command. Placing his foot beneath the breech of his gun, he contrived to raise it so that with his hands, which were fortunately free, he turned the muzzle downwards upon the bear and fired. The charge took effect, and the formidable animal fell dead. Mr. S. doubtless felt that he had narrowly escaped a deadly peril. The bear was found to weigh 300 pounds.—Rochester American.

☞ The "stirring drum and piercing fife" are heard in our streets almost continually,—the present beautiful weather inviting military and target companies out on parade and for exercise. The "Independent Grocers' Guard," of this City, visited East New-York, Wednesday, on a target excursion. They were commanded by Capt. FINCKS, and were accompanied by MULLER's Band.

MARKET REPORTS.

Markets....Carefully Reported for the N. Y. Daily Times

SATURDAY, June 23—6 P. M.

ASHES—Have not varied. The stock in the Inspection Warehouse, to-day, included 787 bbls. Pearls and 969 bbls. Pots—together, 1,756 bbls.

BARK—Is quiet, but firm, in this market. The Philadelphia Commercial List of this date, says: "There has been a steady demand for Quercitron Bark, and prices are well maintained. Sales of 200 hhds. No. 1, at $35 ⅌ ton. Tanners' Bark is arriving more freely, and is dull and lower. Sales of Spanish Oak at $15@17 ⅌ cord; and Chestnut at $12@13 50 ⅌ cord

New-York Daily Times

NEW-YORK, MONDAY, JUNE 25, 1855.

[illegible] Room to Rent, in Newark, N. J., wishing to advertise in THE DAILY or WEEKLY TIMES, can do so by calling [illegible] Barnes, No. 170 Market-street.

JOB PRINTING.

We are now fully prepared to execute all kinds of Printing, PLAIN and ORNAMENTAL, in the TIMES NEW STYLE, at NEW RATES. Country Merchants who desire Bills or Circulars of any kind, can go in a neat and elegant style, and rely upon entire satisfaction.

Orders left at our office will be promptly attended to.

RAYMOND, HARPER & CO.

☞ The NEW-YORK DAILY TIMES is served in the City and vicinity for One Shilling a week. Single Copies Two Cents. Mail Subscribers Six Dollars a year.

The SEMI-WEEKLY TIMES, containing all the leading matter of the Daily, published Tuesday and Friday, is mailed at Three Dollars a year.

THE WEEKLY TIMES, published Saturday, is mailed at Two Dollars a year for single Copies. THREE Copies sent for Five Dollars;—Five Copies for Eight Dollars;—Ten Copies for Twelve Dollars;—Twenty Copies for Twenty Dollars, to one address.

THE TIMES FOR CALIFORNIA is published on the arrival of every Mail steamer. Price, in wrappers, 25 cents for single copies.

THE DAILY TIMES has a regular circulation of over 20,000, and is a medium for business and general advertising to be surpassed by any City journal.

TERMS, invariably Cash in Advance.

Publication Office, No. 128 Nassau-street, corner of Beekman.

The News by the Star of the West.

The news from California, a full summary of which is published on another page of this morning's paper, will be found quite interesting. On the 28th of May the San Francisco City elections took place. The struggle was between Know-Nothings and Democrats; and of the City officers elected, five were Democrats and three Know-Nothings—JAMES VAN NESS, the Democratic candidate for Mayor, receiving a majority of only 65 votes. Of the sixteen Aldermen and Assistant Aldermen elected, eight were nominees of one and eight of the other party, so that the victory has been pretty equally divided between the two.

The creditors of FAGE, BAUER & Co. have been holding several large meetings. Committees were appointed to examine the accounts and affairs generally of the firm, and at a meeting on the 29th of May, Mr. C. K. GARRISON came forward and pledged his property to the amount of $400,000 in support of the house, in order to secure the creditors and stay all further legal proceedings. This proposition seems to have given general satisfaction.

An article from the Alta California on the WALKER and KINNEY expeditions, together with a letter from Colonel KINNEY, published elsewhere, will be read with interest. The two expeditions, it will be seen, have calculated, on meeting in Nicaragua. The Alta states that WALKER enters Nicaragua by the express invitation of CASTELLON, the Democratic candidate for President, who, by special contract, has promised him and his party 72,000 acres of territory, to be chosen from any of the public lands, for the efficient support he is expected to give to the revolutionary cause. Interesting news may soon be expected from that quarter of the world.

The San Francisco market reports present nothing new. The prospects of miners generally were very good, and the accounts of the grain crop flattering in the extreme.

Canal Questions.

The Canal Board have decided by a vote of 4 to 3 not to appeal the case of POST against the Auditor—quoting the refusal on the ground that the case was one of temporary and not permanent appropriation of the waters of the Black River.—Albany Argus.

The Argus is not quite accurate in this case. The Canal Board gave the vote mentioned, but that vote did not pass the resolution,—which contained also a provision that the draft should be paid, and required, therefore, by the rules of the Board, an affirmative vote of five. Actually, therefore, the Board took no action in the matter. The case is one of a good deal of interest and importance. The State has taken water from the Black River to supply the Canal,—to the serious injury, doubtless, of the water power on the river. A law of the State authorizes the Canal Commissioners to appraise and pay these damages in certain cases. In this case, the damages of Mr. POST were appraised at a little over $600,—the Commissioners regarding the appropriation of the water as a temporary one, inasmuch as the State has ordered the construction of reservoirs on the Moose River Lakes for the purpose of supplying to the Black River in dry seasons the water taken from it for the Canal. He accordingly gave his draft for the amount. The Auditor, when the draft was presented, declined to pay it, on the ground that the appropriation of the water was a permanent and not a temporary appropriation, and that the damages should have been awarded on that basis. On application, the Supreme Court issued a mandamus to compel the Auditor to pay the draft,—taking the ground, first, that it was a temporary appropriation, and secondly, that the Auditor was merely a ministerial officer, and that he had no authority to review or set aside the acts of the Canal Commissioners.

A resolution was offered in the Canal Board that the case should be carried up. A substitute, directing the draft to be paid and the case to be discontinued, was passed by a vote of 4 to 3;—but when the question was put on the passage of the resolution thus substituted, the affirmative vote being four when five are requisite, it was lost. The matter, therefore, stands just as if the Board had taken no action. We understand, however, that the Auditor had already taken steps to have the case taken to the Court of Appeals, where it will, therefore, be decided. If that Court decides that the appropriation of the water was a permanent one, the State will of course be liable to much heavier damages, for the erection of reservoirs to supply the River with a work of supererogation. It will not be easy, however, in any case, to have a more accurate definition of the powers and duties of the Auditor.

Sauce Unique.

Monsieur Huc, the French Missionary, in his recently published book of Travels in China, sets down the Chinese as the most systematic and wholesale liars on the face of the earth. His opportunities for observation have undoubtedly been good;—but so important a judgement should not be hastily pronounced. Though he has traveled a great deal, he has not been everywhere; and it is not always fair, moreover, to judge the character of a whole people by the habits and conduct of the individuals one happens to meet. Although M. Huc has been all over Europe and Asia, he has never been in Oneida County; nor has he had any opportunity of comparing the gifts of sundry Editors in that section of the Empire State, with those of the Mandarins and other officials of the Celestial Empire, in the particular to which he refers. It is not always in good taste to boast extravagantly of one's own countrymen; and we are well aware that Americans are often denounced for deeming their people the smartest in all creation, and superior to all others in every accomplishment open to general competition. But, without any overweening national vanity, we cannot help believing that if he had fallen in with the Editors of the Rome Excelsior, the Utica Teetotaller and the Oneida Herald, and had been forced to cultivate their acquaintance as closely as he did that of his Chinese friends, Monsieur Huc would have hesitated before he awarded the palm to the latter.

The first two papers named belong to that habitually intemperate class of journals which find a substitute for the stimulus of rum in the more malignant, and therefore more palatable, stimulus of slander and falsehood. Malice with them stands in the place of brains; and no conception of the obligations of truth and common decency seems ever to have dawned upon them. There is no end, and we do not remember ever having seen any beginning, to their fabrications and fulminations about the TIMES, and its Editor; but the public seems to be, if possible, even more indifferent than ourselves to them all. The Oneida Herald is a paper of different professions, but similar practices. It garnishes its libels somewhat less with capital letters and exclamation points than its competitors; but this is the only particular in which they have any decided advantage over it.

We took occasion some weeks since to compliment the Herald upon its unrivaled faculty of condensing its falsehoods, and took the trouble, by way of illustration, of picking out and labeling five separate and distinct fabrications in a single sentence. The notice we took of it then seems to have stimulated it to fresh efforts. We cannot say that it has improved much on its old achievements in this line,—for in fact there was not much room for improvement;—but it holds its own remarkably. One of its late issues says in one sentence that the TIMES "has turned something like half a dozen summersets on the Temperance question;"—adds in the next that it has now "gone bodily over to the ranks of the liquor men,"—and caps the climax by the crowning falsehood that "it defends the conduct of the mob at Portland." Here within the compass of as many lines, are three bald and palpable falsehoods,—each as "well-defined and separate" as the six-and-thirty stenches which COLEridge found in the scented city of Cologne. The Herald's superiority over the Teetotaller in this matter of condensation is very manifest; for the latter paper, in an emulous effort the next week, only succeeded in bringing forth the single falsehood that the TIMES is "now as open an opponent of the Prohibitory Law as the New-York Herald and Albany Atlas." Possibly it designed to make up in magnitude what it lacked in number. If that was its purpose, it did not altogether fail.

Now, it certainly is a matter of very little consequence to anybody, and none at all to us, what the prints referred to may say of the TIMES or its course. We have a very respectable circle of readers, who are intelligent enough to form their own opinions concerning what they may find in its columns; and we never feel under the necessity of making an argument to convince them that what our assailants say of us is not true. But we are unwilling that the numerous readers of M. HUC's popular and most entertaining book of travels should come hastily to the conclusion, that there cannot be found in this free and independent country, as gifted and as accomplished liars as those whom he so extols. Though we do not belong to the Know-Nothing Order, we are unwilling to see the laurel that may belong in America thus unceremoniously awarded to a class of ignorant and unnaturalized foreigners. At all events there ought to be a fair field and no favor; and a final judgment ought not to be rendered until M. HUC has had an opportunity of comparing our Oneida friends with his Chinese experts.

☞ The Commercial seems to have been as badly "sold" as the Mayor, by the canard that the Governor intended to call out the military in this City on the Fourth of July, to enforce the Prohibitory Law. It is naturally, therefore, quite indignant at our intimation that the Mayor's letter of inquiry was impertinent, as well as at the curt tone of the Governor's reply. Such an act, argues the Commercial, would have led to fearful scenes of slaughter, and to a lamentable destruction of life and property;—therefore, it was the Mayor's duty to inquire of the Governor whether he intended to commit it. Conceding the Commercial's premises, our inference from them would be that it was the Mayor's duty to presume that the Governor would not commit it,—until he had some official and reliable information on the subject. We have always understood that the Mayor's duty extended over a large field and embraced a great variety of subjects; but we were never aware that it belonged to him, as the Executive of the City, to institute an official inquiry into every absurd and foolish rumor that might be set afloat by malicious or mischievous persons. We hope, at all events, that he is entirely satisfied with the success of his experiment in this case.

A Conciliatory Word.

Next to a consciousness of deserving praise is, in the way of satisfaction, perhaps, the reception of it from one who has habitually, persistently and bitterly belied you. To have one's position in society acknowledged and recognized by those who claim to lead in it, is something, provided the acknowledgment does not come as it did from CHESTERFIELD to JOHNSON, at a time when it is no longer needed. So a young nation just emerging from obscurity, may be proud of commendation and appreciation from its elders when seasonably given, which it will pass by with a derisive smile in the maturity of its growth and power. When we remember the hereditary hatred—for hatred may be hereditary in newspapers as well as men—of the London Times, the Jupiter Tonans now of the British nation, as formerly of the British aristocracy, the pertinacity and virulency of its attacks upon everything American, beginning with its people and institutions and ending with cursing the very soil from which they sprung, it is certainly worth while to chronicle words such as the following, which appeared in one of its leaders a few days since: "France, England and the United States, stand in the vanward of civilization." Indeed! So the "young and chivalrous Emperor of Austria," prudent Prussia, and even "heroic Sardinia," which has been dragooned by the Allies into throwing away her little army in another's quarrel,—all are passed by, and the Atlantic is crossed in order to place an indifferent spectator of the bloody broil "in the vanward of civilization."

Whether this declaration is the tardy homage which prejudice is forced to pay to truth, on the commencement of a conciliatory policy by which the Allies hope to make evident to the United States the blessings, present and prospective, which they are conferring on the East and humanity in general, by investing Sebastopol and peppering it with shells and stink-pots, we cannot say. Perhaps the compliment is the point of a mingling of both motives. At all events we ought not to be too much elated by being thought worthy of being esteemed the compeers of France and England in civilization.

It is not many years since "despotic, barbarous" Russia was in high favor in England. ALISON went so far then as to pronounce her the destined regenerator of the East, and hailed with joy the approaching period when she should plant the cross on the dome of Saint SOPHIA.

But times have changed. "The most disreputable paper in England" then caressed the CZAR and cursed the United States. The former now sinks into the "despot" and the "barbarian," while the latter is seen to emerge through the glasses of the Times "in the vanward of civilization."

Monuments.

We trust that the recent movement of some of the citizens of Brooklyn will result in the tardy discharge of an act of patriotism and propriety—the erection of a suitable monument to the martyrs who perished in our waters on board British prison-ships during the war of the Revolution.

It is a little surprising, considering the pride of America in her early history and her first heroes, that so little has been done to mark the spots which patriotic valor has forever sanctified, and to commemorate the men whose deeds have endeared their memory to the nation, by monuments and medals and public statues.

Magnificent mountains and rivers give grandeur to a country, but monuments upon its hills, images of heroes who have honored it in their lives, in the public squares of its cities, and medals struck in commemoration of great events, give it soul and life. They keep the present perpetually in the presence of the great deeds of the past, and preserve the heroic spirit of a nation.

The traveler beholds in London the figure of the idol of England, the Duke of WELLINGTON; at Berlin, that of the great FREDERICK; at Paris, on the summit of the column in the Place Vendôme, the bronze representation of the great conqueror, NAPOLEON. But he will look in vain through the squares and streets of the capital of the Western World for the image of the great and good WASHINGTON.

This ought not to be so. If the hurry of life, the pursuit of money and of pleasure are so great with us that we cannot stop to honor all our heroes and statesmen who are numbered with the dead, let us pause long enough at least to rear a worthy monument in the most conspicuous place in the City to the memory of WASHINGTON. The feelings of the heart in matters of this kind, for the sake of liberty and patriotism, ought to show themselves in external acts. Thus the stranger will be impressed with the reality of the veneration of the Republic towards those who sustained its doubtful fortunes with their lives, and the citizen will be forever urged to emulate their heroism under like circumstances.

We hope the movement to erect a monument to the prison-ship martyrs will be carried forward, and incite our citizens to take steps for the erection of a monument which shall worthily commemorate the Father of his Country.

☞ We are advised that in various quarters persons traveling represent themselves as Correspondents or agents of the TIMES; and on the strength of such representations solicit and often receive free passage on Railroads and steamboats, and immunity from other payments to which ordinary travelers are subjected. We desire it to be distinctly understood that no person whatever has any authority, or any permission, from the Proprietors of this paper to make such representations or solicit such privileges; and that any one who may claim to be a correspondent or agent of the TIMES for any such purpose, without being able to show the proper written credentials, is undoubtedly a swindler and should be treated accordingly. Railroad Conductors, Steamboat Captains and Hotel keepers will render us a special service by informing us of every attempt to impose upon them in the way described.

A REASONABLE REQUEST.—One of the Sunday papers says that DANIEL D. BRIDGES, Esq., one of the present United States Appraisers, who has been an Alderman and served a full term without making himself a nuisance, wishes the public to distinctly understand that he is no relative of the other BRIDGES, who is now an Alderman. We can appreciate the feeling that led at the bottom of his anxiety on this point, and cheerfully give his request the benefit of this additional publicity.

Amusements.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—MOZART's divine opera of "Don Giovanni" will be produced to-night by the La Grange troupe. If the announcement does not crowd the house, music is well nigh extinct among us. "Don Giovanni" is one of those operas which the world requires to bring it back to a perception of the true and beautiful in art. It is ever lasting in its freshness; unfailing in its abundant geniality, and elevating, always, in its tender, loving simplicity.

The cast to-night is remarkably strong. Zerlina, Madame LA GRANGE; Donna Anna, Madame ROSE DEVRIES, (her first appearance in two years;) Donna Elvira, Madame CATARINA DE FERRARI, (her first appearance in this country;) Don Ottavio, Signor MIRATE; Don Giovanni, Signor MORELLI; Leporello, Signor ROVERE.

METROPOLITAN THEATRE.—The Grand German Musical Festival of the the United Vocal Societies of the Northern, Eastern and Southern States comes off to-night. This event takes place yearly, in one or other of the principal cities of the Middle States, and is in every respect of high musical importance. The united choruses number a thousand voices. A grand orchestra of one hundred performers, under the able baton of Mr. BERGMANN, accompanies and assists this immense mass. Effects of the superbest character may be expected from such a combination.

BURTON'S THEATER.—The experiment of a Summer season at this house has been attended with success. During the past week several benefits came off—among others, Mrs. HOUGH'S, a lady who is beginning to be rightly appreciated. Three pieces are on the bill for to-night—"Born to Good Luck," "New-York As It Is," (with the original Mose, Mr. CHANFRAU,) and "The Secret."

WALLACK'S THEATER.—The second performance of the German Opera Company on Friday night attracted a moderate attendance. Until after the 4th of July a positively good audience can scarcely be expected. Gothamites are leaving for the country, and visitors will not arrive until then. There is in consequence ample accommodation for those who preserve, in the interim, an appetite for pleasure. The performance on Friday night was excellent. Every allowance must of course be made for the smallness of means employed by the management. But what can be done with a moderate company and a fine orchestra is done.

To-morrow night LORTZING's comic opera, the "Czar and the Zimmerman," will be produced. Madame SEIDENSTRICKER is announced as the heroine, but as this lady is to sing at the Academy of Music on the same evening, we suppose there is a mistake somewhere. Don't know where.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—BALFE's spectacle opera, "The Daughter of St. Mark," was repeated here on every evening of last week, and we are informed now goes off in a creditable manner. It is announced for to-night. Miss LOUISA PYNE, Mr. HARRISON and the other prominent members of the troupe appear.

BROADWAY THEATRE.—This excellently conducted establishment opens to-night for a brief Summer season. Two popular and remunerative stars have been engaged for the occasion—Mr. and Mrs. BARNEY WILLIAMS. They appear in three pieces—"Paudeen O'Rafferty," "It's the Custom of the Country," and "Barney the Baron."

CONCERT.—Master AUGUSTUS LUCA, a black pianist, who is called the "Ethiopian THALBERG," announces a concert for Wednesday evening, at the Tabernacle.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—Signor ROSSETTI, a tenor of eminence, who has been some months in America, but without an opportunity of displaying his powers, makes his first appearance to-morrow evening in DONIZETTI's "Belisario." Signors MANZINI, Madame SEIDENSTRICKER, and others, will assist. We hope there will be a good attendance.

BUCKLEY'S SERENADERS during the repairing of their Hall are giving entertainments in the provinces. To-night they sing in Albany. We commend them to our readers.

There are yet two excellent companies (of Negro Minstrels) in New-York—CHRISTY & WOODS, No. 472 Broadway, and PERHAM's, No. 663 Broadway.

In the way of Equestrianism there is the Olympic Circus, No. 45 Bowery, and in the way of FINE ARTS the DUSSELDORF Gallery (unequaled) and JOHN R. SMITH's Grand Tour of Europe and Siege of Sebastopol, No. 539 Broadway.

City Mortality.

Dull times for undertakers now. The City Inspector reports but 322 deaths in this City last week, 31 less than the previous week, and a decrease of 115 as compared with the corresponding week of last year. Of the whole number of deaths, 3 were caused by apoplexy, 1 by cholera, 33 by consumption, 21 by convulsions, infantile, 2 by debility, adult, 3 by delirium tremens, 7 by diarrhœa, 7 by dysentery, 25 by scarlet fever, 1 by insanity, 2 by jaundice, 1 by small-pox, and 10 by measles; 14 were from violent causes and 2 from old age; 36 died at the public institutions. Nativities:—United States, 231; Ireland, 56; Germany, 19; England, 7; France, 3; Scotland, 2; Switzerland, 1; West Indies, 1; unknown, 1; 103 of the entire number of deaths were children under 1 year of age.

Completion of the Census.

At a Convention of the Census Marshals, held at the Broadway House on Friday evening, 22d inst., it appeared that they would complete their work and finish their copying by the middle of July. Some of the Marshals reported that they had subdivided their Districts in order to secure the prompt completion of the Census. A General Convention of the entire body of Marshals is here by called to meet at the Broadway House on Friday, June 29, at 7½ o'clock P. M.

Festival of St. John.

To-day the Festival of St. John, whom the Free Masons claim as one of them, is to be celebrated in divers places and in sundry ways. The new steamer Thomas C. Height takes a party to Bridgeport. Another company go up to New-Rochelle by the New-Haven Road, to swell a grand procession and take part in imposing ceremonies. The Doric Lodge make an excursion in the Laura Knapp. A pleasant day and a good time to all of them.

☞ It is hardly necessary to say, perhaps, that the Sunday Liquor Law is no longer enforced. All the saloons were open as usual yesterday, but we did not notice about them as many loungers as usual. The rainy, cloudy, foggy and uncertain state of the weather probably kept the loungers within doors, as it did many other more respectable persons.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE

By Telegraph to the New-York Daily Times

The Massachusetts Know-Nothings.

BOSTON, Saturday, June 23.

A meeting of Know-Nothings in the Eleventh Ward of this city last night, was addressed by Senator WILSON and Governor GARDNER. The former confined his speech to the subject of the Philadelphia National Convention, asserting that it was the aim and desire of the Massachusetts delegation to avoid the question of Slavery, which was forced upon them by the South, and they were obliged to meet it then and there.

In the Convention, Mr. BOWLIN, of Virginia, said he intended to whip some Massachusetts men, and Judge CONE, of Georgia, demanded and would have a declaration from the North in favor of Slavery, otherwise her delegates would leave. Mr. WILSON said that seventeen of the Platform Committee supported the majority resolutions, principally coming from States where the American party had been defeated; and they were opposed by fourteen delegates representing twenty-six electoral votes in those States where the American party have triumphed. The delegates from Georgia went in for GEORGE LAW for President, and six from Pennsylvania. Mr. WILSON said that Governor GARDNER told the South that not a city nor a town in Massachusetts would support the majority platform, and that Mr. BROOKS, of the New-York Express, had said that the whole North would spurn the platform. It was attempted in the platform to put him (WILSON) down, to turn him out, when GOV. GARDNER declared that if such was the result, he too would leave. Mr. WILSON was very severe on the "doughfaced" New-York delegation, who he charged with keeping the Massachusetts delegation from the Council for twenty-four hours after the proceedings commenced.

Death of Judge Samuel S. Wilde.

BOSTON, Saturday, June 23.

Judge SAMUEL S. WILDE, for many years a Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, died at his residence in this City last night. He was 85 years old.

The death of the Judge was announced to-day in the Municipal and Common Pleas courts, when, after appropriate remarks by Judge HOAR and MELLEN, and Mr. COOLEY, County Attorney, both Courts adjourned till Monday.

Murder Through Jealousy.

BOSTON, Sunday, June 24.

Last night, actuated by jealousy, LYDIA JAMES stabbed FRANCIS MATHAS, a sailor, in North street, so that he died to-day in the hospital. Both parties colored.

We have had an easterly wind all day, and this evening rain is falling.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, Friday, June 22.

Hon. HENRY SIMMONDS, Mayor of Maidstone, England, was presented yesterday to the President of the United States at the White House, and also to Governor MARCY, Secretary of State.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, June 23.

That Consul FABENS and FLETCHER WEBSTER came hither for the purpose of getting a clearance for Colonel KINNEY's steamer is generally believed, but in the conferences with certain executive officers they did not broach the subject. The present temper of the Administration is decidedly against such action.

The War Department has received further advices which entirely discredit the reported capture of Fort Laramie by the Indians.

The Ohio Republican State Convention.

CINCINNATI, Saturday, June 23.

A large Convention was held here to-day to nominate delegates to the Republican State Convention to be held at Columbus on the 13th July. Owing to the fact that two calls had been published—one for to-day and another for the 7th July—a good deal of excitement prevailed; but a compromise was finally effected, and it was finally agreed that there should be only one Convention, and the Know-Nothings, Anti-Slavery men and outsiders all united, and the list of delegates reported by the Compromise Committee was adopted almost unanimously.

Fatal Affrays in Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Saturday, June 23.

Two edge-tool makers, named CUNNINGHAM and FOWLER, got into a quarrel to-day, which resulted in the latter being shot dead and the former seriously wounded by a blow from a hammer.

The weather here continues wet.

The Liquor Law in Connecticut.

MIDDLETOWN, CONN., Saturday, June 23.

J. S. PARKER, of the McDonough House, and PETER ROSENKRANTZ, were tried to-day for violating the Liquor Law. The former was found guilty on four indictments, and ROSENKRANTZ on three. They were fined $20 and costs, from which they appealed and gave sureties. These cases were prosecuted to test the constitutionality of the Liquor Law.

Fatal Accident at the Falls of Niagara.

NIAGARA FALLS, Saturday, June 23.

A man went over the American Falls this morning. He was in the act of landing from a skiff just above the rapids, when he was carried away by the current, and his boat capsized. His name is unknown, but he is supposed to have been on his way from Canada with vegetables.

Railroad Accident and Death.

CONCORD, N. H., Saturday, June 23.

An Irishman named SULLIVAN was killed on the railroad, about a mile from here, by the early train to Boston. He stepped from one track to avoid one train and was run down by another, the approach of which he had not noticed. His head was severed from his body.

Kentucky Politics.

LOUISVILLE, Saturday, June 23.

Colonel PRESTON, Sag Nicht, has announced himself a candidate for Congress from this district, in opposition to Colonel MARSHALL, the American candidate. Colonel THOS. F. MARSHALL has announced himself a candidate for Congress from the Ashland District, in opposition to his brother, Dr. MARSHALL, the American candidate.

Accident to the Steamboat Northerner.

CHICAGO, Saturday, June 23.

The steamer Northerner left St. Louis on Wednesday evening last, and when about fifteen miles down the river, struck a rock, and the water gaining on her very rapidly, she was run on the bar, where she sank up to her guards. None of the passengers or crew were injured.

Arrival of the Daniel Webster at New-Orleans.

NEW-ORLEANS, Friday, June 22.

The steamship Daniel Webster, from San Juan Nicaragua, arrived here to-day, bringing 83 passengers and San Francisco dates to the 1st inst.

Maine Politics.

PORTLAND, Saturday, June 23.

The straight Whigs held a public caucus here this evening, and chose delegates to the State Convention of straight Whigs to be held in this city next Thursday.

Acquitted.

LOUISVILLE, Saturday, June 23.

Mrs. FRAZER, and a man named CRING, charged with murdering Mr. FRAZER, the husband of the woman, were acquitted at Lexington to-day.

Mortality in Boston.

BOSTON, Saturday, June 23.

The deaths in Boston, for the week ending to-day, were 69, ten of which were from small pox.

By Telegraph.

BOSTON, June 24—Ariel, ship J. Montgomery, Bennett, New-Orleans; San Carlos, Blanco, Liverpool, bark Frank, Otto, Trinidad; brig Vulture, Perkins, Portland.

THE LIQUOR SERVED IN BROOKLYN.

The Brooklyn City Court Decides Beer Legally Constituted.

The People vs. Rachel Baldwin.—As will be remembered that on Thursday last Rachel Baldwin was arraigned in the Brooklyn City Court, to plead to an indictment found by the Grand Jury of that Court, for selling liquor by the glass on his premises, No. 15 Fulton-street, since the 1st of May. Defendant being a member of the Kings County Liquor Dealers' Association, the counsel employed by that Association, Messrs. Lott, Hodges, Hamilton, King and Morris, appeared in his behalf and pleaded that the Brooklyn City Court, as a criminal body, had no existence—it was not legally constituted; that the two Supervisors associated with the Judge were not named in the act creating the Court, and the Court was not organized in conformity with the Oswego Court, claimed to be the model Court.

This question was argued at some length by counsel, and the Court reserved its decision until Saturday. On Saturday (23d inst.) the Court convened and decision was rendered that the Court was legally constituted as a Court of criminal jurisdiction. The Judge in his opinion did not consider the Oswego Court as a model, because others had been previously established, and adhered to in other Courts in the State, showing that in all instances they are constituted the same—that three did attend the formality required by the law. As to the Supervisors they had been placed there by the Legislature, and, in support of his construction, 12th Section, Article 6 of the Constitution, which provides "that all Courts shall remain with their present powers until altered by the Legislature." By this the body had the required power to do what it had done.

Mr. Hodges then reserved the privilege of excepting to the ruling, which was moved by the Court.

Mr. Hodges then moved to set aside the indictment, for the following reasons:

First—Because the Grand Jury that found the indictment was improperly organized, inasmuch as the Grand Jurors were not drawn from the list as required by law, which requires the list to be deposited in the City Clerk's office in October, but they were summoned by the Sheriff, by order of this Court, indiscriminately.

Second—That a sufficient number of Grand Jurors, thus summoned, not appearing on the first day, an additional number of thirty were drawn.

Third—That the list of Grand Jurors from which the first drawing was made was composed exclusively of individuals, inhabitants of only eleven Wards of the city—from the old city of Brooklyn. As a consequence, therefore, this Grand Jury was not drawn from the body of the City of Brooklyn.

Mr. Lott here read the minutes of the Court to substantiate these points.

Fourth—A number of these Grand Jurors were not qualified by law.

Mr. Hodges said they proposed to prove these points by affidavits and the record.

The Court was in doubt as to whether affidavits could be received in proof. He thought the District Attorney had a right to cross question.

E. C. Underhill, Esq., District Attorney, said that he had had no intimation of this motion at all, and wanted some time to consider the question. He would be ready to reply in two hours.

The Court thought best to adjourn the case until some time next week. There was no Jury present, and the trial could not be proceeded with the present week if this question were at once disposed of.

The District Attorney expressed the hope that he might have these preliminary questions disposed of. The liquor cases would have to go off for the term if things went on in this way.

The Court decided to adjourn the case until Monday (this day), at 2 o'clock.

☞ There was a very interesting celebration last evening at the Sands-street Methodist Church, of the Juvenile Sunday School Missionary Association. Rev. Messrs. MILNER and H. G. FINK delivered addresses, and the singing was effective.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

RESIDENTS IN AGUE DISTRICTS MAY ALL INSURE their health the coming Summer, by using a new "Antidote to Malaria," called RHODES' PEYME AND AGUE CURE. It prevents or removes all traces of disease. Dr. Chilton's certificate accompanies each bottle. For sale by C. H. RING, C. V. CLECKNER & CO., and dealers generally. J. A. RHODES, Providence, R. I.

MR. S. S. FITCH, THE AUTHOR OF "SIX Lectures on Consumption," &c., office No. 714 Broadway, New-York. Open daily, Sundays excepted, from 9 until 3.—Consumption, Asthma, Diseases of the lungs, and all chronic diseases of males and females. Consultation free.

HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION FIRE-PROOF Safes, with Hall's Patent Powder-Proof Locks, the safest that were exhibited at the Great Exhibition, London, 1851, and the World's Fair, New-York, 1853, and, and this is the best, and the only powder-proof safe that received a medal at the London World's Fair, during which trial the Hall patent was awarded a medal for Fire Locks. The subscribers are the sole agents for the patent authorized to make and sell the Powder-Proof Locks, with Hall's Patent Powder-proof Locks.

E. G. HERRING & CO.,
Green Block, Nos. 128, 130 and 132 Water-st., New-York.

"THE MOST CONFIRMED CASES OF THE MOST distressing diseases of the urinary organs from which all of us, more or less, are troubled with this unsavory complaint, still as it is a general thing, we do not attempt to publish until something perhaps interesting. We would, as a member, warmly recommend to our readers the use of the same time recommended by their ancestors, Dr. HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS, the original preparation prepared by Dr. C. M. JACKSON, No. 418 Arch st., Philadelphia. We have seen cures effected through its influence.—Saturday Evening Post.

Formula by Druggists and dealers everywhere.

UNDER GARMENTS FOR WARM WEATHER.—The best assortment in the City will be found as usual at A. BARKER'S Hosiery Store, 80, 82 Bowery.

The Bosphor Merino Vests, universally approved by our young men, are universally approved, and are sold at SIXPENCE LOWER THAN EVER.

Call, examine and compare!

A. BARKER & CO.
Established in 1828. No. 80 Bowery.

PHOTOGRAPHIC AND GALVANIZING CHEMICALS.—Photogen, Pyrogallic and Iodic Acids, Iodine, Iodide Potassium, Iodide Iron, Iodide Ammonia, Iodide Mercury, Iodide Cadmium, Iodide Zinc, Iodide Potassium, pure Ether, Hydrofluoric Acid, Iodized Collodion, Nitrated Cyanide Silver, Silver Wire, Cyanide Potassium, and every other article used in the art, manufactured and put up for sale on most reasonable terms by Dr. LEWIS FEUCHTWANGER, No. 55 Mercer-st.

LACE CURTAINS, WINDOW SHADES, &c.—Purchasers have a great advantage in dealing with large establishments, for the reason that they can save the profits of the retail customer. Hence in buying Lace Curtains, Cornices and Window Shades of first class importing and manufacturing concerns like that of KELLY & FERGUSON, No. 501 Broadway, the purchaser participates a share of the profits as well as enjoying the opportunity of selecting from an extensive stock.

THE "YOUNG AMERICA" STYLE OF GENTLEMAN'S HAT.—A. LELAND & CO. are now manufacturing hatters with the above fashionable style of Silver Hat, of our own manufacture. Every hat will have the name printed in gold letters on the inside. We have also a complete assortment of all other styles of Men's Hats and Children's Straw Hats by the last steamer.

A. LELAND & CO., No. 178 Broadway.

As red clouds darken in the twilight,
And darkness covers Heaven's blue delight,
So CHRISTADORO'S HAIR DYE turns
To black the hair that with age burns.

IT CHANGES WHITE, RED, SANDY OR GREY HAIR black or brown in ten minutes. Manufactured and applied at No. 6 Astor-House.

BOSTON PIANOS.—HORACE WATERS, NO. 333 Broadway, has the sole agency of T. Gilbert & Co's Pianos, with and without the Aliquot Scale, Chickering, Mason & Cummings's, and Woodward & Brown's Pianos. All warranted to have the best frames and to stand any climate. They are the best Boston makers, and will be sold at factory prices, wholesale and retail, with a liberal discount to the trade.

BARGAINS—BARGAINS.—WE ARE NOW SELLING at greatly reduced prices our entire stock of rich Brocade Grenadines, Crape de Paris and other styles of Summer Dress Goods. Also, fine French Merinoes, Brocade Silks, worth $1 50. E. H. LEADBEATER & CO.,
No. 80 Bowery.

BATCHELOR'S HAIR DYE—THE ORIGINAL, THE Reliable, the Infallible. Free from all the injurious ingredients of other Dyes. Contains no Nitrate of Silver or any other injurious ingredient. Produces immediately a natural color, and is warranted not to injure the hair or skin, and to counteract the evil effects of bad Dyes. Make and sold or applied, (in private rooms,) at BATCHELOR'S Wig Factory, No. 233 Broadway.

THE WAY TO KEEP COOL.—IF YOU WILL CALL on ALFRED MUNROE & CO., No. 441 Broadway, they will exhibit an extensive assortment of Men's, Boys' and Children's Clothing, elegantly made up. Also, a large and well selected stock of Furnishing Goods, suitable for the season.

SUMMER DRESS GOODS.—WE WILL OPEN ON MONDAY, June 25, five cases fine French Lawns at 25 cents per yard; two cases fine French Jaconets at 12½ cents; fine Organdies, by M. Alex. Tech, Nonpareil, at $1 25 per case, worth $5. E. H. LEADBEATER & CO.,
No. 80 Bowery.

BATCHELOR'S WIGS, TOUPEES, &c.—THE LARGEST and most complete Stock in America, manufactured with all the improvements of 30 years experience, at wholesale or retail. BATCHELOR'S MOLSAVIA CURLS are well known as an invaluable and beautiful article of dress. Manufactured and sold by BATCHELOR, 233 Broadway.

HANDSOMELY ENGRAVED
Wedding, At Home, and Visiting Cards; Initial Stamp for Silver Ware; and Dr. Plates, Seals, &c.
AT THOS. BRUNE,
No. 408 Broadway, corner Broome-st., and No. 20 Bowery.

EVANS' CLOTHING WAREHOUSE, NOS. 59 AND 61 Fulton-st., is the only place where Boys' Clothing Suits are sold at $10; Black Marseilles Suits, $12; Marseilles Vests, $1; Alpaca Coats, $2; Extra Superfine Cloth Dress Coats, $10, &c., &c.

FEATHERS, BEDDING, &c., CONSTANTLY ON hand, comprising, in part, a large assortment of Feather Beds, Feather Bolsters, Pillows, Cots, Mattresses, Quilts and Comforters, at No. 102 Chatham-st., near Division-st., wholesale and retail. M. WILLIAMS.

M. VANDERHOOF'S SPERM, WHALE AND LARD Oils, are manufactured by me in the City. All who have purchased diligently in getting a good article, should try the above oils. Sold by the gallon or barrel. M. VANDERHOOF, No. 1 Cedar-st.

REMOVAL.—HATCH & YALE HAVE REMOVED from No. 10 Cedar-st. to No. 101 Broadway, between Pine and Rebecca-sts.

NEW-YORK CITY.

Interesting Lectures.

Those who care to know more of the social and political affairs of Kansas—and who does not?—will do well to go to-morrow (Tuesday) night to the Tabernacle, where Mr. STARRS delivers a lecture on the subject. The Tabernacle was crowded last evening to hear Mr. STARRS on the religious affairs of that newest country.

[Advertisement.]

Dr. Salmon on the Eye and Ear.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Having recently arrived in America with the special object of entering upon the treatment of diseases affecting the Eye and Ear, and feeling that notwithstanding my continuance of attendance upon the Hospitals of England and Scotland, during a period of eight years, and of graduation at three British Colleges, I could not hope to obtain the confidence of the American public otherwise than by giving a clear exposition of my views in the daily journals, I have determined upon so doing—the course of my first essay the subject of "Deafness."

The great number of persons who are afflicted with this distressing malady, and who are pronounced incurable, simply through the failure of the injudicious treatment often adopted for their relief, induces me to believe that efforts to relieve the public will not be unappreciated.

I am quite aware the course thus pursued is not generally approved by the profession, who, from some plausible reason, seem so little inclined to give the popular information regarding the origin and progress of diseases, to which all are by nature liable.

I have, however, yet to learn that a departure from the vague limits of that so-called professional etiquette would render the calling of a Physician more the exclusive of some mystic art, than the practice of a liberal and enlightened science—is unworthy or degrading, nay that it not positively desirable and salutary—desirable, that it will tend to rent out ignorant prejudice, and red (from useful knowledge; salutary, that it will lead sufferers to seek timely rational aid, rather than trust to empirics' empirics and their nostrums.

In this view, I am also aware I have been ably preceded by my talented friend, Dr. ROBERT HUNTER, the great practical utility of whose productions—unobscured as they are by the technical jargon of medical literature—is unquestionable.

With these few words of explanation, I will close my introductory letter, feeling confident your readers will, in the publication of this series, trace a desire on my part to become useful and instructive in this department of my profession, for which instruction, careful study, and a long experience, have united to qualify me.

Your most obedient servant,

FRANCIS SALTER, M. D.,

Eaye & Ear, Oculist and Aurist, No. 289 Broadway, New-York.

[Advertisement.]

Astor House.—The undersigned have renewed their lease of this house. It has been refitted, and is now in better condition than when first opened to the public.

New baths and water closets have been introduced upon every floor.

The massive walls, its improved and complete ventilation, render it the coolest house in this City during hot weather.

In everything necessary to promote the real comfort of ladies and gentlemen it is second to none.

Its proximity to the Railroads enables our patrons to reach any portion of the City without delay, and at trifling expense.

It is situated in the healthiest Ward of the City, and the Park and open grounds opposite, present advantages unequaled.

Its convenient position for Merchants and for all parties connected with the great public enterprises of the country, is appreciated, and rooms are always in readiness for the accommodation of meetings, &c.

Breakfast from early morning until 11 o'clock. Dinner (or Gentlemen's Ordinary, 5½ o'clock; Ladies' Ordinary, 6½ and 8 o'clock.

For the accommodation of business men, dinner will be served from 1 until 2½ o'clock.

Grateful for the past, we pledge ourselves to our patrons that every thing requisite for their comfort and happiness while under our roof, shall be provided without stint, and at a cost to them not exceeding that of any other first-class Hotel in this City.

New-York, June, 1855.

COLEMAN & STETSON.

[Advertisement.]

☞ Free excursion on Monday, June 25, to that beautiful Summer retreat, Fort Hamilton, where there will be an auction sale of 116 splendid villa sites, which commands a full view of the Bay and Ocean for 30 miles, also of Staten Island and the surrounding country. There is good bathing, fishing and boating. The railroad, now in a state of completion, is to run directly to this property, and steamboats ply eight times a day to and from Fort Hamilton, making it only from 20 to 30 minutes from New-York. The sale is to commence at Peabody P. M. The steamer Norwalk will leave Pier No. 2 North River at 10 o'clock A. M., and 1 P. M. Free tickets, maps and all particulars can be had of JAMES W. BARKER or J. T. MOULTON, No. 3 Nassau-street, New-York.

[Advertisement.]

NECESSITY, A HARD MASTER.—We were reminded of this truism by a recent visit to Messrs. CHAS. HEARN & Co., No. 301 Grand-street. This celebrated house, (with a stock second to none in magnitude and richness,) from the general depression of business, have determined to close it out at a sacrifice equal to the emergency it demands. Several times during our visit we noticed the surprise of purchasers at the more modest prices of rich dress goods, rich beiges of the finest texture and the most brilliant colors at one shilling per yard; Paris mantillas at $3 and $4; rich silks at four and five shillings per yard. Of the policy of such a sacrifice we leave to the judgment of the proprietors, but assure our readers of its truth.

[Advertisement.]

☞ While wearing RAY's Superior Zephyr Merino Undergarments you

Know Nothing of morning chills,
Nothing of mid-day heats,
Nothing of evening dews,
Everything of the wisdom and pleasure of wearing the coolest, healthiest and pleasantest Summer undergarment ever offered to the approbation of a discerning public. The prices range from three to sixteen shillings. Examine and judge, purchase and enjoy, at JAMES B. RAY's Family Hosiery and Undergarment Factory, No. 160 Bowery, near Grand-street, New-York.

[Advertisement.]

☞ Summer Under Garments and Hosiery of every description, and at the very lowest price, will be found at

SARNY'S OLD STAND No. 104 BOWERY.

Special attention is invited at this season to the

SILVER MERINO UNDER-VEST,

originally introduced at our establishment several years since, and which have been universally approved for their lightness, elasticity, durability and cheapness.

A. RANKIN & Co., No. 104 Bowery.

[Advertisement.]

WHEN DOCTORS AGREE WHO SHALL DARE DISPUTE!—Allopathic, Homœopathic and Hydropathic, one and all, agree in recommending the comfort-imparting and health-promoting

STOCKING-KNIT UNDER-GARMENTS, for Summer wear, sold at RAY's Family Hosiery and Under-Garment Manufactory, No. 160 Bowery, near Grand-street, New-York.

[Advertisement.]

GAS, GAS, GAS.—ARCHER WARNER & Co. are now manufacturing Chandeliers and other new styles of Gas Fixtures, which for beauty of design and superior workmanship are unsurpassed in any country. Specimens at our great depot, No. 276 Broadway. Also, a new portable gas works for country dwellings, churches, factories, &c., warranted.

[Advertisement.]

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—The Liver, the Stomach, the Kidneys.—These valuable Pills, acting directly upon these organs, cleanse them from all impurities, and thus give health and vigor to the system. Sold at the manufactories, 80 Maiden-lane, New-York, and 244 Strand, London, and by all druggists, at 25 cents, 62½ cents, and $1 per box.

[Advertisement.]

DECIDEDLY THE MOST USEFUL AND VALUABLE MEDICINE IN THE WORLD.—The unprecedented demand for DUTCHER'S CALCINED MAGNESIA is now daily supplied through the Post-Office, always fresh, from the manufactory of the proprietor, J. DUTCHER, No. 62 State-street, Albany, N. Y. Single box, 50c.; including package for 1,000 miles, 31c.

[Advertisement.]

TEAS.—The best assortment of Fine Teas will be found at the Chinese Tea Company's newly erected and elegant store, No. 125 Chatham-street, (between Pearl and Roosevelt-streets,) the cheapest Tea establishment in the City. We assure our readers they will do better here than elsewhere either at wholesale or retail.

[Advertisement.]

☞ The Zephyr Undershirts sold by JAMES E. RAY, No. 160 Bowery, are indeed a superior article. To the invalid they are health; to the delicate constitution, protection; to the strong man, safety; to all, comfort and luxury.

[Advertisement.]

☞ EVANS' clothing warehouse, Nos. 66 and 68 Fulton-street, is the only place where zephyr tweed dress suits are sold for $10; check Marseilles suits, $6 50; linen linen suits, $3, &c., &c.

[Advertisement.]

☞ Upright Grand Piano, price $600, for sale at $350, as will be rented very low.

HORACE WATERS, No. 333 Broadway.

[Advertisement.]

DOUBLE ACTION HARP, BY BROWN.—Been used eight months; price, $600, will be sold for $300.

HORACE WATERS, No. 333 Broadway.

[Advertisement.]

BLAKE'S PATENT FIRE-PROOF PAINT, No. 119 Pearl-street.—See under head of Patents.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

DR. TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA

☞ Is as this Season most Invaluable as a Renovator and

PURIFIER OF THE BLOOD.

It not only renders new, rich and pure blood, but it will effectually carry off all putrid humors, cleanse the stomach, regulate the bowels, impart a new and vigor to the whole system, and

KEEP THE BLOOD PURE.

One great recommendation for using this Sarsaparilla is that every bottle of it is manufactured under the direct superintendence of the most celebrated Chemist and Physician in this country, and his certificate attached to each bottle guarantees that it is "PURELY VEGETABLE, AND WITHOUT MERCURY."

DR. JAMES R. CHILTON,

There has never yet been a medicine presented to the public which has so effectually established its character for "PURIFYING THE BLOOD AS DR. TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA," and the fact that it has entirely superseded all other preparations claiming the same properties, alone speaks volumes in its favor.

THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE.

Only purify the Blood, and disease must vanish.

Wholesale and Retail Depôt, No. 212 Broadway, corner of Fulton-st. OFFICE, No. 2, opposite St. Paul's Church.

☞ Lonky Vermin, Wet Cellars, &c.—EFFECTUALLY REMEDIED, WATER, DAMPNESS, IMPURE AIR, RATS, &c., ENTIRELY EXCLUDED FROM CELLARS, CEMETERY VAULTS, &c. The percolation of water prevented from ALLEY-WAYS, AREAS-SIDE-WALKS, top of street VAULTS, &c., with HYDRO, IMPERVIOUS ASPHALTIC CEMENT, the only effectual remedy yet discovered, as prepared and applied by A. B. MOEN, No. 2 Pine-st., under Metropolitan Bank.

Inquire of Messrs. KIRKER & BULL, No. 28 Murray-st.; C. W. & J. T. MOORE, corner of Church and Barclay-sts., and Park-place; J. M. DAVIS, JONES & CO., No. 2 Warren-st.; D. DEVLIN & CO., Nos. 258 and 260 Broadway, and JOHN ANDERSON & CO., cor. Broadway and Pine-st.

☞ Corn Farina.—Corn Farina.—This article has been tested, and proved to contain a greater degree of delicacy and flavor as a preparation for the table and more nourishment as a dish than anything ever offered for the same purposes.

Extra hulled Hominy and Samp, manufactured on a new and improved plan, warranted a superior article to any now in the market, put up in 5 and 10 lb. bags, expressly for family use. Prepared and sold by BENSEL & HOLMAN, Washington Mills, No. 215 Centre-st., or to be had at any of the principal grocery stores in the City.

☞ Ladies, Before You Go to the Country supply yourselves with a pair of those beautiful French Gaiters, any color for $1 75, from HARRIOTT'S Broadway Family Shoe Emporium, No. 435 Broadway, corner of Howard-st. He is now offering, also, a fine assortment of Linen Gaiters and Slippers for Summer use.

Ladies', Misses, Childrens', Boys' and Youths Boots and Shoes in every variety, at low prices for cash.

☞ Redding's Russian Salve—25 cts. a Box.—A Boston remedy of 20 years' standing—a sure and speedy cure for Burns, Sores, Boils, and all external injuries; recommended by physicians. Sold by all druggists in the United States. A. B. & D. SANDS, C. V. CLICKENER & CO., C. H. RING, New-York; WM. B. SIDNER, JOHN GILBERT & CO., Philadelphia, and REDDING & CO., Proprietors, Boston.

☞ Removed.—BENJAMIN'S GOLD MEDAL

BRASS SPRING TRUSSES,

To No. 1 Barclay-st., corner Broadway.

This Truss never rusts, nor grows weak from use. Six days' trial given, and money returned if not satisfactory.

☞ Balm of Thousand Flowers.—For beautifying the complexion and eradicating all tan, pimples or freckles from the face. PETRIDGE & CO., Franklin-square, New-York; for sale by C. H. RING, Broadway, and all druggists.

☞ New-York Young Men's Christian Association.—The regular monthly meeting of this Association will be held on MONDAY EVENING, the 25th instant, at 8 o'clock, at the rooms, Clinton Hall. Mr. RICHARD C. McCORMICK, Jr., who was appointed as a delegate to visit the Young Men's Christian Associations throughout Europe, having returned, will make his report. A full attendance of the members is requested; and young men generally are cordially invited to be present.

A. JUDSON WINTERTON, Recording Secretary.

☞ The Corner-stone of the New Reformed Dutch Church, on Clermont av., near Myrtle-av., Brooklyn, (Rev. Mr. BLEECKER'S,) will, Providence permitting, be laid on Monday, 25th inst., at 4 o'clock P. M. Addresses may be expected from Rev. Dr. DEWITT, Rev. Dr. BETHUNE and Rev. Mr. POLHEMUS. All friendly to the object are invited to attend.

J. C. MEEKER,
WM. CROLIUS,
B. F. ORAGIN,
} Building Committee.

☞ Dr. Collins in Brooklyn.—Lectures to Ladies and Gentlemen, with Models, Machines, &c., at the Park Institute, Clinton-st., near Fulton-st., Brooklyn, on MONDAY, TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY EVENINGS, at 8 o'clock. Admission 12½ cents. At 3 o'clock on THURSDAY AFTERNOON, the 28th, he will lecture to Ladies exclusively, and at 8 o'clock in the EVENING to Gentlemen exclusively. Admission 25 cents.

☞ Celebration of the Fourth of July.—Societies intending to join in the celebration of the approaching ANNIVERSARY of OUR NATIONAL INDEPENDENCE, will communicate by letter with the undersigned, Committee of the Common Council. CHAS. H. MAXWELL, Chairman.—G. H. TUCKER, Secretary.

☞ Dr. Pitkeney's Vegetable Family Pills.—Thirty years without an equal. A standard medicine. A. M. & D. SANDS, Agents, No. 100 Fulton-st., N. Y.

PUBLIC MEETINGS.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—"We are no Republicans, and never intend to be."—John Wesley.

Episcopal Methodists can't American in its Spirit and Tendency! Dangerous! Not to Republicanism!

A course of Lectures on the above will be given at Knickerbocker Hall, corner of 8th-av. and 23d-st., commencing on THURSDAY EVENING, the 21st inst., at 8 o'clock, by JOHN QUINCY ADAMS. The first lecture will be free.

The succeeding lectures will be given on WEDNESDAY EVENING, the 27th inst., and will be devoted to the Church Property Question, in which the famous speech of Hon. J. Q. ADAMS, in the New-York Senate, will be reported, as replying to Episcopal Methodism. Admission to the second lecture 20 cents.

STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL.—The South St.-st., Presb. Church will hold a Strawberry and Ice Cream Festival on WEDNESDAY EVENING, June 27th inst., at the Odeon, 5th st., near South 6th, Brooklyn (Williamsburg). Tickets 50c. each, including refreshments.

J. H. VANDERWATER.

NEW AND EXTENSIVE JOB PRINTING OFFICE.

NEW TYPE AND STEAM PRESSES, AND EVERY REQUISITE FOR EXECUTING ALL KINDS OF PLAIN AND ORNAMENTAL PRINTING

SUCH AS

BOOKS,	CIRCULARS,
PAMPHLETS,	CARDS,
CHECKS,	BILL-HEADS,
NOTES,	HAND-BILLS,
RECEIPTS,	LABELS,
STORE BILLS,	SHOW BILLS.

And all kinds of MERCANTILE PRINTING at the LOWEST CASH PRICE.

Orders left at the office of this paper promptly attended to

THE UNITED STATES MECHANICAL STREET CLEANING COMPANY—are now prepared to contract with corporations, contractors, turnpike or plank road companies, for cleaning streets and highways of every description by the year, month, or mile, in any part of the United States. The system of sweeping patented by this Company, together with their improved and cleaning machines, has received the highest commendations from the press and authorities of every city where they have operated. The merits of their machines are not only valuable as efficient street cleaners, but as preservatives of the street pavements, particularly of an cobble stones, macadam and wooden blocks. In this respect they deserve the testimony of every civil engineer who witnesses their construction and effect of operation. In cities and large towns they should be the whole system of cleaning, sparing the municipalities from the annoyance of obstructing and impeding the public traffic in streets cleaned in a thorough manner in a few hours. For particulars address SMITH, GECKELL & CO., No. 320 Broadway, New-York, No. 115 South Front-st., Philadelphia.

HARRISON'S AMANDINE.—A preventive and cure for chapped hands or face. It renders rough skin of the skin, improved and healthy, and beautiful. It will keep water, dirt, and all injurious substances out of the skin. Manufactured only by the sole AMERICAN PERFUMER, who pack other perfumery of this country are famous for years enough. E. TOWNSEND & WILLIAMS, No. 416 Broadway, sole agents. Every dealer will supply any quantity of it at wholesale; as will CHILADOR, No. 184 Broadway, at retail.

SODA WATER APPARATUS.—WM. GEE's Patent Soda Water Apparatus, for manufacturing soda water; patented June 12, 1855. No. 68 Fulton-st., New-York.

WANTED.

SITUATIONS WANTED.—By a very respectable, efficient and well educated married couple (both English Protestants); the man as coachman or groom; he is a safe and steady driver, and understands the care of horses; his wife is an excellent cook, and would assist to wash and iron. They are first-class servants, with most unexceptionable references. Apply at No. 211 Bowery until Thursday next. No objection to the country.

SITUATIONS WANTED.—By two respectable young girls, of neat and tidy habits; one is a competent fine washer and ironer; does up ladies' muslins in the neatest style, and is a competent chambermaid; wages $6 a month; in the City or a few miles in the country; the other is a smart, tidy girl, 15 years old; can sew; mind a baby, or wait on a lady; wages $2 a month. Excellent City references. Call at No. 217 East 23d-st.

SITUATION WANTED.—By an experienced Protestant cook; understands her business in all its branches; is competent to take charge of any gentleman's kitchen, having served in the highest families; also, a professed laundress, can get up all kinds of fine washing in superior style; is a good ironer; would prefer to go South to the highest families in the City for a year. To be seen at Mrs. MANNING'S advertising office, No. 369 7th-av.

SITUATIONS WANTED.—In City or country by two respectable and very competent Protestant girls; first-rate cook, washer and ironer, or to do general housework; the other is a first rate chambermaid and waiter, or to assist in washing and ironing; no objection to go in the country. Call at No. 369 Bowery, in the Confectionery store.

SITUATIONS WANTED.—By an experienced young woman, as a respectable family, as cook; understands it in all its branches; willing to assist in washing and ironing. No objection to go to the country. A good wood baker. The best of City references given. Call for two days at No. 62 20th-st., corner of 6th-av., second floor, back room.

SITUATION WANTED.—By a respectable young woman, as cook, washer and ironer in a respectable private family. Best of City references from her last place, where she has lived six years. Can be seen for few days, if not engaged. Inquire at No. 102 West 15th-st., 2d floor, back room.

SITUATION WANTED.—By a respectable young girl between the age of 13 and 14, to take children. Has no objection to go South. Can be seen at No. 128 Eld-st., between Avenues C and D, third door, back room.

SITUATION WANTED.—By a respectable woman as first class chambermaid and nurse; is willing to do general housework in a private family. City references. Apply at No. 130 Broome-st.

SITUATION WANTED.—As chambermaid, waiter, or nurse and seamstress, by a young woman, having excellent recommendations from her last place. No objection to the country. Apply at No. 371 East 12th-st.

SITUATION WANTED.—By a respectable Scotch Protestant girl to do cooking, washing and ironing, is a good baker, and first-rate laundress. No objection to the country. Call at No. 128 Bowery.

WET NURSE.—Wanted by a respectable young American widow, with a fresh breast of milk, a situation as wet nurse in a gentleman's family; would have no objection to go to the country for the Summer. Good references can be given and validity can be proved. Call for two days at No. 214 2d-av., second door from the corner of 14th-st., third door, front room.

GUN IMPORTERS.—A superior practical man in the Gun trade, who can take charge of any gentleman's kitchen, having served in the highest families; also, a professed laundress, can get up all kinds of fine washing in superior style; is a good ironer. Can be seen for a few days, at the highest families in the City for year. To be seen at Mrs. MANNING'S advertising office, No. 369 7th-av.

SITUATIONS WANTED.—In City or country by two respectable and very competent Protestant girls; first-rate cook, washer and ironer; or to do general housework; the other is a first rate chambermaid and waiter, or to assist in washing and ironing; no objection to go in the country. Call at No. 369 Bowery, in the Confectionery store.

SITUATIONS WANTED.—By two very respectable Scotch Protestant girls; one as first rate cook, washer and ironer, or to do general housework; the other is a first rate chambermaid and waiter, or to assist in washing and ironing; no objection to go in the country. Call at No. 369 Bowery, in the Confectionery store.

SITUATIONS WANTED.—By an experienced young woman, as a respectable family, as cook; understands it in all its branches; willing to assist in washing and ironing. No objection to go to the country. A good wood baker. The best of City references given. Call for two days at No. 62 20th-st., corner of 6th-av., second floor, back room.

SITUATION WANTED.—By a respectable young woman, as cook, washer and ironer in a respectable private family. Best of City references from her last place, where she has lived six years. Can be seen for few days, if not engaged. Inquire at No. 102 West 15th-st., 2d floor, back room.

SITUATION WANTED.—By a respectable young girl between the age of 13 and 14, to take children. Has no objection to go South. Can be seen at No. 128 Eld-st., between Avenues C and D, third door, back room.

SITUATION WANTED.—By a respectable woman as first class chambermaid and nurse; is willing to do general housework in a private family. City references. Apply at No. 130 Broome-st.

SITUATION WANTED.—As chambermaid, waiter, or nurse and seamstress, by a young woman, having excellent recommendations from her last place. No objection to the country. Apply at No. 371 East 12th-st.

SITUATION WANTED.—By a respectable Scotch Protestant girl to do cooking, washing and ironing, is a good baker, and first-rate laundress. No objection to the country. Call at No. 128 Bowery.

WET NURSE.—Wanted by a respectable young American widow, with a fresh breast of milk, a situation as wet nurse in a gentleman's family; would have no objection to go to the country for the Summer. Good references can be given and validity can be proved. Call for two days at No. 214 2d-av., second door from the corner of 14th-st., third door, front room.

GUN IMPORTERS.—A superior practical man in the Gun trade, who can take charge of any gentleman's kitchen, having served in the highest families; also, a professed laundress, can get up all kinds of fine washing in superior style; is a good ironer. Can be seen for a few days, at the highest families in the City for year. To be seen at Mrs. MANNING'S advertising office, No. 369 7th-av.

TO TEACHERS.—A young lady who has taught with success for several years, desires to make an engagement from the 1st of September, as instructress in the higher English branches and Mathematics. She can furnish references of the first class. Address B. T. & CO., No. 146 Bedford-st.

RARE OPPORTUNITY FOR A FAMILY.—Or Ladies visiting England, seeking a female servant. An intelligent Scotch girl, who understands cooking, desirous of obtaining such a situation; address MARY, No. 370 High-st., Newark, New-Jersey.

PAPERMAKER WANTED IMMEDIATELY.—A competent journeyman machine tender can have constant employment of good wages, at our mills on the Brandywine, near Wilmington, Del. Apply to E. A. TERRY, Wilmington, Del., or to BISHOP & MOORE, No. 16 and 18 North-st., Philadelphia.

BOY WANTED.—To learn the dry business, about 140 miles from New-York by railroad. A boy not to board, truth-telling boy need apply. Call at No. 280 West 16th-st., with specimen of handwriting and references.

TWELVE OR FIFTEEN FUR HAT FINISHERS WANTED.—Apply corner Hopkins and Willoughby-sts., Brooklyn. J. H. PERRICE & CO.

CHRISTIAN HOME FOR FEMALE SERVANTS, 25th-st., between 6th and 7th-avenues.—Governesses, housekeepers, also servants in every capacity supplied free of charge. Also, a few good boys, from 12 years upwards, can be seen within a few steps of the door. A French lady's maid now at the institution; also, an English housekeeper, who thoroughly understands cooking.

SERVANTS.—A large number of servants, with good references, can be had at the office, No. 12 5th-av., one door from Fourth-st., among whom are eight or ten Protestants and two Welsh girls. No charge to employers.

ALL PROTESTANT SERVANTS.—Applying at No. 7 Carmine-st., get engaged, as the best families in town and country come to this office for help of all kinds.

BOARDING.

BOARD IN BROOKLYN.—Families or single gentlemen can be accommodated with board and rooms, singly or in suites, in a pleasantly located house. Inquire on the premises, No. 79 Sands-st., Brooklyn. References required.

BOARDING.—Furnished Rooms to let to gentlemen and their wives, or to a party of gentlemen; situated in the most part of the City. Dinner at 5 o'clock. References exchanged. Apply to No. 32 West 22d-st., between 5th and 6th ave.

BOARDING IN CATHARINE-STREET.—Furnished rooms for single gentlemen, with or without board, at No. 1 Monroe-st., corner of Catharine. Terms moderate.

BOARDING.—For several persons may be obtained by Ladies wishing superior accommodations, in one of the most desirable locations in South Brooklyn. Apply at Carroll-place, seventh house east from Court-st.

BOARDING.—Gentlemen can be accommodated with well furnished rooms, and breakfast, if required; at No. 11 University-place, corner 8th-st. Best of references as to responsibility required.

BOARDING.—Pleasant rooms, with good board, for a few gentlemen or ladies, in a first-class house, having all the modern improvements. No. 36 Rutgers-st.

BOARD IN THE COUNTRY.—About two hours from the city; 3 large suite of rooms on the first floor with small rooms above; would prefer a private table if required; on the Hudson River; healthy situation and the best of accommodations. Inquire of Mr. GODFREY, Union square Post Office.

BOARDING ON BROOKLYN HEIGHTS.—A gentleman and wife can be accommodated with a furnished or unfurnished room; also, two or three single gentlemen; in a delightful situation; three minutes' walk from Fulton or Wall-st. Ferries, in Cranberry and Willow sts.

BROOKLYN.—A private family, having more room than they want, can accommodate a gentleman and his wife, or two single gentlemen, with board. The house is handsomely furnished, and has all the modern improvements. The situation is delightful. Call at No. 402, Pacific-st., South Brooklyn, between Nevin and Bond sts.

COUNTRY BOARD.—The subscriber has a number of large rooms unoccupied in his delightful farm-residence, near Glen Cove, and families wishing to secure them will do well to make immediate application, either in person or by letter, to CHARLES UNDERHILL, Glen Cove, L. I.

COUNTRY BOARD AT PLUSHING, L. I.—A small family can accommodate one or two married couple for the Summer. Address S. M. Y., Times office.

NO. 147 HUDSON-ST.—Opposite St. John's Park. Furnished rooms to let, with board to single gentlemen, or gentlemen and their wives. Rooms newly furnished, with all the modern improvements. To let single or in suites.

FAMILIES FROM THE SOUTH.—And other transient boarders, can be accommodated with suites of furnished rooms and board, by the day or week, at No. 52 and 54 East 29d-st.

TO CENSUS CANVASSERS AND ALL WRITERS.—PRINCE'S PROTEAN FOUNTAIN PEN is an important aid, containing ink sufficient to write constantly from three to six hours, according to size. The reservoir is made of incorrodible material, under Goodyear's Patent, containing a gold pen of the finest quality. Prices $2 50, $3, $3 50, $4, and $4 50, sent by mail on receipt of the money. Liberal terms to agents and the trade.

T. G. STEARNS, General Agent,
No. 371 Broadway, New-York.

GOURAUD'S LIBRARY OF ROMANCE.

JULIA WRIGHT.—CANTO XXVIII.

'Tis sweet, at night on some romantic lake,
To watch the shimmering moonbeam's silver shoen,
When not a breath of air bestirs to break
The inverted image of the stars.
Amid this quiet, lo! the serene shade
And trouble—as if moved by hand unseen!
Resembling much a modest maiden's shrinking;
Of all the world suspicious—I am thinking!

But, sweeter far than all these, is to see a pure, white, clear, transparent skin—free from tan, freckles, sallowness, pimples, redness, roughness, chap, cracks and chafes—in short, such a one as a free use of Gouraud's celebrated Italian Medicated Soap is certain to produce. To gentlemen this soap is invaluable as a shaving compound. Gouraud's Poudre Subtile are warranted to extirpate superfluous hair. Gouraud's Hair Dye will positively color red, light, or gray hair a beautiful jet black. Gouraud's Liquid Rouge is a magnificent cosmetic preparation for tinting pale cheeks with carnation hues. Dr. FELIX GOURAUD'S renowned preparations can be obtained, genuine, at his Depôt, No. 67 Walker-st., first store from Broadway, and Mrs. HAYES, Brooklyn.

NOTICE TO OWNERS OF DOGS.—Notice is hereby given, that on and after MONDAY, June 25, inst., the Ordinance requiring DOGS found running LOOSE, or at large in contempt of said ord., without being muzzled, will be strictly enforced. The sum of FIFTY CENTS will be paid for every dog brought alive to the pound, on the corner of 1st-av. and 26th-st., with which shall have been found in the street, running loose or at large without being muzzled, upon the production of the Certificate of the Pound Keeper to the CHIEF OF POLICE, at his Office in the Park. Owners of Dogs may redeem them at the Pound, between sunrise and sunset on the day on which they were received, on payment of expenses.

FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor.

BROADHEAD & STORRS, wholesale Grocers, No. 68 Barclay-st., late of Washington-street, have a large stock of Groceries, on the most reasonable terms. N. B.—Remember the "Old Stand," Sp. 68 Cortlandt-st.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

BLANCHE DEARWOOD,

THE NEW ROMANCE

OF AMERICAN LIFE,

Continues to receive the favorable notice of the Press.

From the New-York Commercial Advertiser.

A more attractive and entertaining book has not been published here for years.

From the New-York Daily Times.

The best new American novel of the season.

From the Philadelphia Post.

A singular book, written with a power not often equalled.

From the Worcester Transcript.

This novel bears the unmistakable marks of genius, combining romantic incidents with truth to nature. The heroine is the very personification of all those essential and captivating characteristics of the female character—a beautiful embodiment of a noble woman.

From the Evening Post.

The characters are drawn with more skill than is usually shown in works of this class.

From the Presbyterian Eagle.

This is a most excellent story.

From the Newark Advertiser.

An unusual amount of feeling, depth and variety of thought.

From the Saturday Courier.

We have never met a tale of more engrossing interest.

From the Sunday Atlas.

Our attention was soon riveted by passages of uncommon power.

From the New-York Express.

The best new novel before the public, and likely to continue so for a long time.

From the Boston Transcript.

A domestic story of transparent interest.

From the New-York Herald.

There are few modern tales the perusal of which has given us more pleasure.

From the Sunday Courier.

It has the gentleness and delicacy of perception peculiar to the female mind, and yet the masculine strength of expression and vigor of imagination peculiar to men.

From the Pennsylvanian.

The author has struck for himself a new path in the beaten walks of literature, and has produced a work that must be appreciated.

12mo., cloth, $1; Paper, 75 cents.

BUNCE & BROTHER, Publishers,
No. 126 Nassau-st.

WILL BE PUBLISHED EARLY IN JULY:

MEMOIRS OF JAMES GORDON BENNETT, AND HIS TIMES.

BY A JOURNALIST.

In one 12mo. vol., 400 pages, with a fine Steel Portrait from an original drawing. Price $1 25.

This anxiously expected work will be published early in July. It is the history of a remarkable man—one whose industry, talents and real character are little known to the public, although his name is familiar to the world as

THE LEADING JOURNALIST OF THE UNITED STATES.

The volume will give a panoramic view of public events in politics, commerce, society and newspaper literature for the past thirty-five years. The biography is written solely as a spontaneous act of literary justice, by one fully capable to treat the theme with candor and fearlessness, with taste and impartiality.

It is a work, in brief, that every man will desire to read, alike for its valuable thoughts, its important facts, and its design to establish Journalism as a dignified profession.

N. B.—Orders should be sent without delay in order to procure a prompt supply on the day of publication. This work will not be sent without special orders.

STRINGER & TOWNSEND, Publishers,
No. 222 Broadway, New-York.

Subscription books with specimen pages, and canvassing circulars for agents and canvassers, will be furnished on application to the publishers. Subscribers' copies will be delivered in advance of publication.

DR. WATERHOUSE'S NEW BOOK.

MARRIED AND SINGLE WOMAN'S MEDICAL COMPANION:

SHOWING THE WHOLE ORIGIN

AND

MYSTERY OF LIFE AND MARRIAGE;

AND THE

CAUSES OF HAPPINESS AND MISERY.

BY GEORGE WATERHOUSE,

Royal Professor of Anatomy and Physiology, London.

It is a work which all persons, old and young, male and female, married or single, ought to read, on account of the rare and valuable knowledge which it contains, and the useful hints which it gives for increasing the FELICITIES, avoiding the INFELICITIES of MARRIED LIFE.

Any person remitting $1, will receive a copy of the book by return mail. Address

W. P. PETRIDGE & CO., Franklin-square.

IRVING'S LIFE OF WASHINGTON.

The first edition of this important work will be in three handsome volumes, octavo, nice type, with portraits and plans. This edition is

PUBLISHED BY SUBSCRIPTION ONLY,

price $3 per volume in cloth. The whole will be completed during this year.

THE FIRST VOLUME IS NOW READY, and will be supplied on application, or sent post-paid to any part of the United States within 3,000 miles, on receipt of $3.

G. P. PUTNAM & CO. Publishers,
No. 10 Park-place, New-York.

N. B.—DUPLICATE SETS OF THE COPYRIGHTED ELECTROTYPE PLATES being now nearly complete, the Publishers hope to have a full supply of the work in a very few days, so that all subscribers may be supplied without the delay hitherto inevitable.

JUST PUBLISHED, THE BOOK OF

MEN, WOMEN AND BABIES,

OR THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE

HEALTH, WEALTH, LONGEVITY,

AND THE

BEAUTIFUL IN HUMAN BEINGS!

By Dr. PORTER, of New-York.

Published by DEWITT & DAVENPORT, Tribune Buildings.

THIS DAY PUBLISHED.

STRAUSS' LIFE OF JESUS.

THE LIFE OF JESUS, CRITICALLY EXAMINED by Dr. DAVID FREDERICK STRAUSS, translated by the translator of "Feuerbach's Essence of Christianity." Elegant 8vo., of 861 pages; matches "Comte's Positive Philosophy." Fine portrait. Price $2 50.

C. BLANCHARD, No. 82 Nassau-st.

JUST PUBLISHED,

WAR IN THE EAST.

A Second Edition of Robert Southgate's GREAT LITTLE WORK on the present War in the East is just issued. The numerous disappointed applicants for this book can now be supplied. Price 25 cents.

PUDNEY & RUSSELL, No. 79 John-st.

NEW LAW BOOK.

HOWARD'S COURT OF APPEALS CASES.

By NATHAN HOWARD, Jr., Counselor at Law.

For sale by JOHN J. DIGGSY & CO., No. 1 Nassau-st.

WILL BE READY ON THE 1ST OF JULY,

"THE OLD FARM-HOUSE."

By Mrs. CAROLINE H. BUTLER LAING.

Illustrated with fine Engravings, by Von Ingen, from Designs by White. 400 pages, 12mo. Extra muslin gilt $1 25.

The above work is a beautiful domestic story of New-England. The plot is full of interest, the characters, the charming views of country life, the follies of a fashionable city life, and all the varied topics brought upon the scene of the story described in the happiest manner.

A copy will be sent to any part of the Union free, on receipt of the price.

CHARLES H. DAVIS, Publisher,
No. 29 South 4th-st., Philadelphia.

REDUCED PRICES.—WATCHES, JEWELRY, DIAMONDS AND SILVERWARE.

The undersigned, for the last eighteen years a well known dealer and jeweler, offers his goods at a less profit than heretofore, for the same quality, than any other house in New-York, Philadelphia, or any other city, and will send by mail or express.

WATCHES, JEWELRY, &c.,

to all parts of the United States, free of charge. All goods warranted as represented. Orders by mail (post-paid) faithfully attended to.

WATCHES.

DAGUERREOTYPE WATCHES	$100 to $150
JURGENSON WATCHES, gold	100 to 150
COOPER WATCHES, gold, warranted	120 to 170
INDEPENDENT SECOND WATCHES	125 to 200
POCKET CHRONOMETERS	125 to 200
EIGHT-DAY METAL WATCHES	50 to 125
LADIES' ENAMELED WATCHES	25 to 100
LADIES' DIAMOND WATCHES	65 to 300
MAGIC WATCHES	100 to 75
GOLD HUNTING LEVERS, full jeweled, 18 carat	40
GOLD OPEN-FACED LEVERS, full jeweled, 18 carat	32
SILVER OPEN-FACED LEVERS, full jewelled	18
SILVER LEPINES	4

JEWELRY.

EAR-RINGS	$1 50 to $200 00
PINS	1 50 to 25 00
BRACELETS	2 00 to 100 00
GOLD LOCKETS, 1, 2 and 4 glasses	2 00 to 25 00
GOLD GUARD CHAINS	10 00 to 60 00
GOLD CHAIN LINE, or BELT CHAINS	10 00 to 150 00
GOLD VEST CHAINS	8 00 to 50 00
GOLD FOB CHAINS	3 00 to 15 00
GOLD PENCILS	1 25 to 10 00
GOLD PEN and PENCILS	3 00 to 25 00
GOLD CROSSES	2 50 to 12 00
CHASED GOLD RINGS	1 00 to 5 00
PLAIN GOLD RINGS	25 to 2 00

Jewelry of every description.

DIAMONDS.

DIAMOND SINGLE STONE PINS	$15 00 to $1,000 00

EUROPEAN STEAMERS.

NAME.	FROM.	TO.	DATE.
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	June 23
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	June 23
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	June 23

AUCTION SALES.

J. F. HOULTON, Auctioneer.

CONSOLIDATION BANK OF FORT HAMILTON PROPERTY.—J. F. HOULTON will sell on MONDAY, June 25, one o'clock, on the ground, 115 VILLA STREET, The lots vary in size from 25x100 to half an acre; many of them are finely shaded with forest trees, commanding a full view of the Bay and Ocean, together with some of the finest scenery in the world; good neighbors and cellars. The railroad is in a state of completion, and is to run directly to this property, and Steamboats ply on and from Fort Hamilton eight times a day, thus rendering the property accessible by land or water. Terms easy. The entire HORSEWALK will have Amnesty, at and 104, Spring-st., 31 and 104, and from Pier No. 3 North River, 10 A. M., and 1 P. M. For Ruby Tickets, Maps and full particulars, apply to SAMUEL W. BARKER, No. 3 Nassau-st., or J. F. HOULTON, Auctioneer.

CHARTERS COAL COMPANY.—TRUSTEES' SALE OF COAL WORKS, LANDS, BUILDINGS, MACHINERY, &c.—By virtue of a certain power vested in us contained in, and by a certain deed of trust, bearing date the 1st day of April, 1854, and duly recorded in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in Mortgage Book, vol. 23, page 431, &c., I will expose to sale, by Public Auction, on the SECOND DAY of AUGUST, 1855, at 10 o'clock, P. M., all and singular the ESTATE, PROPERTY and PREMISES included in said mortgage, and hereinafter described, and briefly designated and described as follows: All the Coal which is in and has been duly located by the Charters Coal Company, in the following tracts of land, situate in Schuylkill County, of the county aforesaid, to wit: The Jacob Ulrich, Jacob Nickle, M. Yocum and William McCorkle tracts of land, in the Township of Tremont, containing 113 acres and 108 perches, and particularly described in a deed from J. W. Reynolds to said Company, dated the 1st day of April, 1854, and recorded in the Deed Book, vol. 23, page 431, &c. The Mahanoy Tract, being the tract of land of Mr. Ford, Mr. Ulrich, Mr. Yocum, Mr. Nickle, Mr. Kline, Mr. Dewalt and William McCorkle

New-York Daily Times

DR. HUNTER ON INHALATION.

Letter No. XVIII.

THE REPUTATORY DOCTORS.

The Vain—The Prejudiced—and the Ignorant.

An Eager Disciple with Misinterpreting Aspirations.

Old Burton's Philosophy Tritely Applied.

"Inventions," "New Systems," and "Improvements" in Publication.

ELIAS'S VIEWS ON THIS SUBJECT.

[illegible]

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

My object in publishing the medical testimony contained in my last letter was to show that the profession everywhere approve of Inhalation. There is not a day passes that I am not applied to by physicians of this City for advice in their own cases, or for members of their family, or for patients under their care, and all most have found too willing to render their every assistance in my power, consistent with the position I have assumed regarding my own interests and the good name and success of Inhalation.

When physicians so universally admit the safety and efficacy of inhalation, why, let me ask, is not every case of disease of the lungs in this City, and throughout the Union, whenever my letters have been read and a knowledge of this practice extended, at once placed under treatment? Are they to die without being permitted to avail themselves of a means of relief within the reach of all, simply because their physicians are ignorant of the practical application of this mode of treatment, and are unwilling to give up the case into my hands? With a practice unprecedented in magnitude—a success too more greater than was ever heretofore thought possible to attain in the treatment of diseases of the lungs—with unbounded opportunities for observation and experience, and an intimate and practical knowledge of the nature of those maladies which can be safely and beneficially ameliorated by inhalation, the patient has surely a better promise of recovery under my care than he could have under theirs—and knowing this and admitting it as they have done in their letters to myself, those physicians who deny or discourage their patients from the use of inhalation and retain them under the usual treatment, knowing that they have no remedy to offer on which they can rely with the least prospect of cure, charge themselves with the responsibility of their patients' lives. Their vanity, their prejudices, their ignorance of their owning lead them on to crime. For in these days it is criminal to be ignorant; it is criminal to neglect the opportunities of acquiring knowledge, and possessing knowledge, it is worse than criminal, willfully to disregard the power which knowledge gives and the benefits it can bestow on others.

I come now to the execution of a less pleasing task, namely, to remonstrate somewhat on the absence of these courtesies and considerations which should characterize gentlemen of every profession in life. Among the communications of correspondence before me, I have many letters from Physicians, of the character of the one which follows. While I withhold the name, I give it as an example, to show with what sagacious money would persuade me to comply my time in writing out prescriptions for their cases, leaving them the medical advantage of reaping all the benefit of my labors.

NEWYORK, Jan. 4, 1855.

DR. HUNTER—Dear Sir: I am desirous to test, practically, your method of treatment in Pulmonary complaints, as I have several patients in subjects for such treatment at this time; with this object in view I write you. I wish to know the cost of the apparatus for Inhalation—this is one point. Then, again, can you find no infringe the respecting the composition of the different classes of medicine used in Lung and Throat Diseases?

But if, on the contrary, you withhold such information, I will not further annoy you. I defer giving my opinion until I determine for myself its utility.

Very respectfully, yours, M. D.

Here certainly is the blackest constitution! After the perusal of my pamphlet, which I gave him gratis, in answer to a former letter, this "worthy doctor" desires "to test, practically, my method of treatment;" and that he may do so, wishes me to furnish him with all my preparations—the fruits of years of toil, study, and expenditure. If I decline to do this, he "will not again annoy me." On this condition alone am I to be spared from his further intrusion. But if I do comply with his request, he will experiment on his "several consumptive patients, as subjects for this treatment," and then give me the results of his experience. If he succeeds his patients, or if he administers injudiciously or fails, he will doubtless generously charge his failure to my treatment, rather than to his own inexperience. But should he succeed in curing his cases, through the prescriptions I furnish him, he actually intimates (for he certainly does not say it in words) that he will then give me the great influence of their opinion and the benefit of their "influence to give." In declining to comply with the medical gentleman's request, it may be that I do not sufficiently appreciate his great condescension in offering to profit himself by my work, and generously estimate the great influence his name would have in extending my practice. But if so, my excuse will be found in the fact that, both in his private and professional character, he is entirely unknown to me.

Unknown as this gentle epistle is, it has been suggested to me, by experience, by a physician from somewhere on Long Island, by an interview with which he favored me. Returning my study one morning, I found that the gentleman who desired to see me had sprawled himself off in my chair with great nonchalance, and was in the enjoyment of a legislative propensities by a narrow scrutiny of every object within his range of vision. "Well, Doctor," said he, before I had time to receive from my lips, "I've been down to Wareman & Clark's and purchased three of your inhalers, and now I want you to just give me some of the prescriptions for the medicines to use. I've quite a number of cases of Consumption, and I'm determined to go into this practice."

There is a class of physicians who possess the legal right to fellowship with the profession, but are wholly unworthy of consideration; these are distinguished by the vile practice of misrepresenting their professional brethren—making sly insinuations and retailing the gossip of the multitude to their patients whenever it can serve their own ends; with such men—and I know a few of them—I do not intercourse. Old Burton tells us, "Scoffs, jeers, taunts, and bitterness, that both moreover, and more, are generally by the blind fury, error and ignorance of the vulgar, and of such as are no better than they, to be thrown on the inventor of the invention." Such men are the bane of all improvement, and scorn to steal merit as an honest man steals his purse. Such men, our ideas and our reputation, being naked one day what he thought of certain medical practitioners, exclaimed, "these fellows steal my ideas, and then they lick it up." Such men are none physicians—and, for the honor of my profession, let us hope they are few in number—who, after having wantonly ridiculed every remedy known to themselves, not only continue in formal attendance upon their unemployed patients, but, knowing the disease in which their opinions are held, use all their influence to induce them from the employment of Inhalation. I have at present under my care a lady who, from having herself disease, became a sufferer, has been successful in expunging, in one notable instance, the prejudices and scorn of this practice. Suffering severely from pulmonary disease, she applied to Dr. Fo[illegible] with a full knowledge of this City, for advice. After a careful examination of her lungs, he prescribed the usual mode of treatment, and was particular in insisting on the importance of strictly observing directions he gave. Not satisfied with the [illegible] she sought another physician, who prescribed, what [illegible] was told, was the medicine prescribed. After she had been under my care for six weeks, she [illegible] Dr. F—, to an evening party, and was [illegible] by him on her recovery appearance. He inquired into her general symptoms, and spoke of her as recovering disease. Her mother, who was present, [illegible] the white she was following out his directions. Not wishing to mislead the Doctor, she frankly told him she had followed his advice under my care, and was then using Inhalation, to which she attributed her improvement.

Does the reader suppose Dr. F— had the liberality to think that the improvement must be due to this treatment? On the contrary, whether his head was affected by a lack of sympathy and consideration, he replied, "My dear madam, I am extremely sorry to hear this; physicians cannot do of the least service in your cases, then. I regret to tell you that your lungs are filled with tubercles, and you only deceive yourself with the hope of recovery. Your life hangs by a feeble thread, which cannot long remain you, and that treatment will only [illegible] (Notes Bene) Generous mind! What kind words of comfort and encouragement were those to a gentle spirit, in a weak and suffering body! But he had mistaken the character of the person with whom he had to deal. He knew not the fortitude, the wit, the courage enshrined in that delicate form.

In this great success to destroy the confidence of my patient in the only treatment which afforded her the least prospect of recovery, and to tear from her rudely that hope of returning health on which the proper action of medicines so much depended, he not only failed but drew upon himself the sharp and well directed shafts of her bitterness and scorn. "Doctor," said she, "You did not tell me this when I consulted you. Am I now to understand that you had then no hope of my recovery, and intended to leave me to die without an effort?" "Oh, no," was the quick reply, "I would have done everything in my power for you, and still would do so." "And yet, Doctor," she replied, "knowing that I could not recover from the use of the medicines you advised—for you have now declared your disbelief in the curability of such cases as mine from any means—you still prescribed for me without saying a word about the state of my lungs; and would not have scrupled to make a bill for such attendance, when you knew it could not be of the least benefit to me. Dr. Hunter, on the contrary, at once told me the nature and extent of my disease, pointed out the part of my case wherein he believed in the possibility of consumption in this stage in which he found my disease—and encouraged me with the assurance that if he did not succeed in effecting a radical cure, he would at least arrest the progress of the disease, prolong my life and render the comparatively comfortable during its lingering term. Already I begin to realize, more rapidly than I dared to hope, the results he promised. You have yourself borne witness to my improvement. I ask you now, before these friends, which is the most consistent in his practice? You, who treat consumption, believing it to be incurable, and knowing that the remedies you prescribe cannot effect any permanent good, or Dr. Hunter, who believes it to be curable by the practice which he has introduced." The Doctor left. I have no doubt, at the time, greatly disgusted with his evening's entertainment; but, either through the arguments of my fair patient, or from some other influence still more potent, he has since rendered the tribute to my practice of sending several of his patients to inhaling.

Here we have a physician who certainly never treated a case of pulmonary disease by inhalation in his life, and ignorant of the proper medicines to employ and of the strength in which they can be used with benefit or even with safety—in fact wholly without experience—after having grossly misrepresented this practice, and only adopting it, but experimenting upon patients under his care, and trusting to his luck, because of his assumed knowledge and experience in the old routine. What can result from the employment of inhalation, under such auspices, but failure and disappointment!

That many practice inhalation at the present moment under the shadow of my prestige, is undeniable. My attention was first awakened to this fact by the following circumstances. Having occasion to go into the shop of a well-known instrument-maker of this City, some time ago, I observed a scarcely close imitation of my Inhaler, and, taking it up, I inquired of Mr. T——, "What have you here?" "Oh!" said he, "that is one of your Inhalers. Dr. —— brought me your book and I made it from the cut. We are selling a great many of them." Another enterprising instance of a similar kind recently occurred. I had occasion to condemn, as defective, a number of glass tubes for my Inhalers. "It is of no consequence," said the maker, "Dr. F. wishes us to make him several gross, just like yours, and we can send him these and make you a new lot!"

Now, if the practice is based on sound principles, and is fully deserving the confidence of the patient, surely knowledge and experience are essential to its safe, proper and successful employment. And what knowledge and what experience have these copyists to offer the public in justification for their confidence? With the greater number it is a mere pressure of the popular will that induces them to adopt the practice—a desire to retain their patients, regardless of all consequences. But even supposing them to be sincere and hearty converts to Inhalation, and that they are chiefly governed in employing it by a desire to do good; still, their want of experience is an almost incommutable obstacle to success, and their failure may sacrifice their patients' health or life.

Duty to myself and to the principles I have labored so hard and so long to establish, compel me to be plain in speaking of these matters. The injudicious employment of inhalation by physicians who avow themselves warm advocates of my views, and affect to understand them, is likely to prove more injurious to this practice than all the detractions of its enemies. The latter will be perfectly understood and entirely disregarded, but the ill success of the former will be more likely to be charged to Inhalation than to its true cause—the want of sufficient skill and experience on the part of the physician. And this dabbling in Inhalation is the more to be condemned, since I am at all times willing to cooperate with them in the treatment of their pulmonary cases—prescribing for the patient on their description of the symptoms of each case, and advising with them from time to time, regardless of the attention to be paid to the general health, diet, exercise and habits of life. At the present moment I am in this manner treating cases under the supervision of their physicians in every part of the Union.

Patients residing at a distance from New-York are often led to employ inhalation under the direction of their own physicians, who, they must know, cannot have had any experience in the practice, simply because they suppose this is the only way they can avail themselves of its benefits. This is not correct. All that I require is, that you should sit down and write me a full description of your symptoms, comprehending the length of time you have been out of health, whether you have any cough, shortness of breath, expectoration, pain in the lungs; if you have ever spit any blood; if you are wasted in flesh; if you have fever, night sweats, or diarrhœa; and that you should give me such other general information regarding your present condition and state of health as your own intelligence shall suggest. On this statement I can always prescribe without the least difficulty, and by keeping up a regular correspondence with you while using inhalations, you can be treated in most cases quite as well at home as in this City. I need scarcely add, that if you can come to the City and permit me to make a thorough investigation of your case personally, you should do so by all means; but it is folly, because you cannot do so at once or for some weeks or months, to put off the treatment until then. Disease will gain ground in the convalescence of the patient; A month later and your malady may be in another stage. Weeks, aye, days, even, are precious in the treatment of all forms of consumptive disease.

As my aim is to be as practical as possible, I cannot refrain from condemning another habit, common with physicians, and after their example very frequently resorted to by the friends of invalids. I allude to the custom of endeavoring to laugh persons out of the belief that they are in any danger. This is mistaken philanthropy—it is murderous kindness. How frequently it happens that persons are thus induced to disregard the first warnings of disease. "Your hacking cough comes from the throat. It is a mere trifle, and will soon pass off." If you are "short of breath and languid," on every exertion, it is because you are "weak, and want a change of air." These are common expressions, and at this season of the year are almost always coupled with the advice, "Go to the country for a few weeks, and all your fears about consumption will disappear. All you want is plenty of pure air." Such are the heedless assertions daily made by physicians who ought to know better, and such the thoughtless advice given by friends, in kindness, to those whom they most dearly love. The evil arising from this advice, in the loss of time and neglect of proper treatment to which it leads, at a time when the disease is simple and easily broken up. In my opinion, there is no point upon which more erroneous views are entertained, than on the important use of "change of air." For the healthy it may be very agreeable to visit, for a short period, some celebrated watering place, but for the invalid such a course is highly detrimental. They require to combine pure air with quiet, gentle exercise, substantial fare, and the genial influence of a few friends. These cannot be found amid the excitements of a crowded hotel. The object of going to the country with the invalid ought to be to assist the action of the remedies employed to cure the disease by improving the general health. There is no question of the very salutary influence produced by these temporary changes of residence, especially when from the impure and heated atmosphere of a city to the pure and unrestrained air of the country, with all the additional enjoyments which ever surround a rural residence. But change of air must not be regarded as a remedy for disease; it will not cause ulceration of the lungs to heal, or tubercles to be absorbed, or chronic inflammation of the air tubes to subside. It will strengthen the system, improve the appetite, and increase every vital action; but the air of the country contains no remedy for consumption. What it does do is to place the system in the most favorable condition for the action of medicines; and if these are applied by inhalation directly to the diseased surface of the lungs, and kept up during the whole sojourn in the country, many who go forth in disease will truly return in health. There is no season so favorable for treatment as the summer months, and no circumstances so favorable to success as the quiet enjoyments of country life.

I have been thus explicit because I know, and painfully feel almost daily, have pressing to the want of proper information on this subject. For the last six weeks scarcely a day has passed that I have not been applied to for advice by persons returning from the South. Many of these consulted me last Autumn, but were so confident of regaining their health by change of climate alone that they could not be persuaded to place themselves under treatment. "No," said they, "but if we do not get better we will do so in the Spring." Alas! many were doomed never again to witness the return of Spring. Many are now returning in a dying state, who could have been saved had they placed themselves under treatment last Fall. And to the present I have not seen one of those who called on me on their way South, who is not in a much worse condition than when he left. In the few in which there is a slight improvement in their general health, the disease in the lungs, then trifling, has become seated and confirmed. Several have died in this City during the past week—having been unable to reach their homes.

Now, the misfortunes of these poor sufferers might have been lightened in all, and in most instances averted altogether, by simply combining proper treatment to arrest the pulmonary disease with the genital influence of a Southern climate. And yet the same suicidal course is now daily being pursued by hundreds who "go to the country," hoping to be restored to health without treatment. They lose the most favorable season for cure, and allow their disease to become firmly seated before they attempt to arrest it.

There is another point on which I must give a word of caution. Persons unversed in medical matters do not realize the difference between the cure of chronic diseases, which must be slowly and become firmly established in the system before they are treated as all, and the cure of an ordinary disease, such as fever or inflammation of only a few days' standing—and are always apt to suppose from inhalation results entirely beyond the reach of attainment. They think because the cure of Consumption is possible, that it ought to take place with incredible rapidity—in fact, that they should "begin to feel that they are getting well" from the day of commencing treatment. One or two months they think should at time enough to break up a disease which has been establishing itself in the system for years, and which has already linked together all the organs of the body in a chain of constitutions and sympathies, many of which are actually more intractable than the original disease. This disposition to expect rapid cure is the extreme of folly, and can only lead those who indulge in it to mortification and disappointment. Chronic diseases cannot be broken up in this summary manner. SHAKESPEARE, one of the wisest and most observing of men, thus encourages the impatient spirit:

> "How poor are they that have not patience!
> What wound did ever heal but by degrees?
> Thou know'st we work by wary and not by magic,
> And events depend on delatory time."

In my previous letters I have explained and dwelt upon the importance of early treatment, and that it should be persevered in so long as the least vestige of disease remains. In some cases the improvement commences with the date of commencing treatment, and progresses steadily until the cure is complete; but in most instances the patient experiences prompt and very great relief from the inhalations, and this goes on with every promise of a rapid cure for a few weeks, and then appears to remain at a stand. The reason for this they cannot comprehend, and yet it is very simple. The lungs are irritated and the air tubes blocked up by accumulations of phlegm, or mucus or pus, which the patient expectorates. Now the first effects of inhalation are to soothe the lungs and cause them to expel this matter which obstructs their action. These objects are generally attained within the first few weeks, and as a consequence the chest feels greatly relieved, but the influence of inhalation in simply relieving the lungs has now reached its highest point, and the process of cure goes on silently and without any external indication of what changes are taking place. If patients will bear in mind the cause of the relief, they will not be surprised because their progress does not appear to be as rapid after as during the first few weeks, and will save themselves from a common source of anxiety.

During the past year I have illustrated the greatest success of inhalation by publishing more than 100 cases of cure of Consumption, Bronchitis and Asthma. In the preceding letter, No. 17, I added the opinions of Physicians from every part of the Union, bearing testimony to the high character of my practice, and the very highly my practice is regarded by the profession. Many of the writers of the letters referred to are distinguished equally for their erudition and their great professional experience. If these combined testimonials do not awaken a profound sense of the cruelty and mockery of treating diseases of the lungs by administering medicines through the stomach, I fear nothing will. Well I know how many influences surround the invalid, and prevent the free, full and proper exercise of his own judgment. It is a disagreeable thing to say to the family physician that you "have determined to seek other advice." Especially is this the case when the physician has been the medical adviser of the family for years, and has taken a deep and sincere interest in the invalid's case.

But in matters of health feelings should have no place. Your duty to yourself and to those who are dependent upon you for happiness or support is superior to all minor considerations. You cannot afford to offer your life a sacrifice to a false delicacy for the feelings of others, and a blind perseverance in a course of treatment which promises no permanent good. Another influence, calculated to unsettle the mind, is the injudicious suggestions of friends. One advises "A few months in the country," another "A delightful excursion to Europe," and a third, some quack compound, which "has cured a friend." The country is very inviting—the trip across the Atlantic combines both exercise and pleasure, and, the new medicine will not cost much, and is said to be so harmless, that "it won't do any injury if it don't do any good."

These are the seductive influences which may be said to surround every invalid. Who can wonder if they often draw him from the distance of his better judgment! But it is useless to disguise the fact, that such means have no power to cure disease of the lungs, and that those who are induced to rely upon them will bitterly regret it when perhaps too late to save them.

I will say a word on the proper time for treatment. Unfortunately, the largest proportion of those cases which have hitherto come under my care, have been in the last stages of confirmed consumption—cases in which part of the lung was not only broken down into cheesy cavities, but the strength of the constitution exhausted by the progress of the disease, and by the different kinds of treatment to which they had been subjected by all kinds of pretenders. I need hardly say that such cases are a proper test of the efficacy of the system of treatment. Humanity was the only influence that could have induced me to receive them as patients at all, since many were in an utterly hopeless state, and could but be made comfortable by the highest skill within the power of man. Yet notwithstanding all these disadvantages and discouragements, a larger proportion of recoveries have taken place among this class through the instrumentality of inhalation, than has ever heretofore been possible to attain from any and every other means of treatment, when employed in the earliest stages and under the most favorable auspices.

From this it will be seen that I regard consumption as curable in every stage, so long as there is sufficient lung left in a state of health to perform the function of respiration. But, properly speaking, we must consider the treatment of all diseases that have reached the last stage as palliative rather than curative. We may, and often do succeed in removing causes to comparative health, the hopelessness of which did not appear to be relievable by any of my predecessors. But these cases only serve to establish the possibility of curing consumption under the most desperate circumstances.

In the earlier stages of the disease when tubercles are formed in the lungs, but not ulcerated, the effects of inhalation are truly surprising. I have seen cases in which one third and often one half of the lung was filled with tubercular matter, restored to perfect health within three or four months—though generally such cases require a longer time)—the fretted and irritated lungs returning again to their healthy state. Under the usual treatment, through the stomach, all such cases die. I do not believe one recovery takes place out of a thousand cases.

In the incipient or commencing stage of consumption, when the "cold" is becoming seated on the lungs—in all forms of "irritation of the mucous lining of the bronchial tubes"—in "sore throat," "catarrh," and "true bronchitis," all of which lead inevitably to consumption, if not arrested, inhalation is an unfailing remedy.

I have here given just three classes of cases, in all of which we may effect a cure by inhalation, but not with the same rapidity or the same certainty.

I desire to make this point so plain that none shall have an excuse for misunderstanding me. I am the more desirous of doing so, because I am led to believe my views have not been heretofore sufficiently well understood. It will soon become necessary for me to construct extensive tables on the results of inhalation—embracing the issue of thousands of cases. From these I shall be able to establish, by unanswerable facts, the surprising success of this most simple and efficacious treatment. When these tables are completed to my satisfaction, I will lay them before the public, with the same frankness which has hitherto characterized all my intercourse with them.

That there should be found one medical man willing to compromise his character for consistency and honesty, by saying a word against the direct application of medicines to the lungs by inhalation, is to me incomprehensible. It is surely more natural than to administer nauseous compounds through the stomach, or to follow the practice of those physicians who have been in the habit, for years, of burning the windpipe with caustics. Within a few weeks a learned and scientific medical association of this City has commenced the pumping of strong caustic solutions into the very air-tubes of the lungs, and this cruel and senseless practice has actually been submitted to trial at one of the hospitals. Now, the cavity of the lungs is an air cavity, and no treatment can be so simple or so natural, for the cure of a disease seated in the air-tubes and air cells, as the breathing of a medicated air. But we cannot with the same impunity medicate the air cavity of the lungs. The lungs were made for air, as the stomach was made for food and drink. It is as natural to breathe medicine in a state of vapor or air as to swallow medicine in a solid or fluid state, and for a disease in the lungs, is infinitely more simple, direct and efficacious.

In conclusion, I cannot refrain from expressing my belief, from the remarkable success which I have obtained from inhalation in pulmonary diseases, that as our observations become more extended and varied, it will be found necessary to remodel the treatment commonly pursued in all diseases depending on impurity of the blood; and more especially so in that large class of diseases which are directly derived from miasmata or from infection. Ague we know to arise from inhaling the poisonous gases generated by the decomposition of vegetable and animal matters on low marshy ground,—about swamps and stagnant water; "Typhus Fever," from breathing the confined and impure air on board of ships and in crowded and ill-ventilated apartments; "Scarlet Fever," "Yellow Fever," and "Small Pox" from inhaling a specific poison exhaled by those suffering from these diseases. When the number diseased is small, the exposure is almost confined to those occupying the same house; but when great numbers are sick, the atmosphere of the whole city or country becomes poisoned, and all classes are exposed to its influence. Cholera, too, the scourge of modern times, owes its birth to something deleterious in the air we breathe, and spreads itself over the globe by the simple diffusion of that contaminating essence through the atmosphere. In all these instances—and many others which I could name were they not sufficiently familiar to you already, the disease is produced by inhaling a poisoned air into the lungs. The poison is absorbed into the blood from the air cells, and rapidly spreads its influence over the whole body. What goes in at the lungs may come out at the skin, in the pustules of small-pox, or the rash of scarlet fever, or may be discharged from the bowels, in the diarrhœa, cholera—nature sinking in her violent efforts to expel it. How surely it is more simple—more in accordance with nature—more likely to result in cure—to administer those medicines which are to neutralize the inhaled poison, also by inhalation. As the poison has found its way into the system through the lungs, there must also be a road through the lungs for the medicine—for nature, in her bountiful goodness, has permitted no disease without providing for it as simple a remedy.

To me these reflections seem to possess the simplicity of true science. They appear so full of promise to mankind, that I will confess, as they press themselves upon me, I am inspired with hope for my profession amounting to a degree of enthusiasm. Already the mists which have obscured its many glories—retarded its progress, and attempted to fix the conclusion of thoughtful minds as the most uncertain of all sciences,—seem to me to grow thinner, and to begin to disperse before the ray of light which this conception has in upon the mind.

It is not my purpose to enlarge upon these ideas at present; but I cannot refrain from expressing them in this connection, and should the time arrive when I can feel that the treatment of Consumption and the kindred affections of the organs of respiration will be so efficiently carried out in other hands, I shall turn with delight from the arduous duties of active practice to the investigation of this inviting field of inquiry.

Your obedient servant,
ROBERT HUNTER, M. D.,
Physician for Diseases of the Lungs.
NEW-YORK, No. [illegible] Broadway, June 23, 1855.

A FREAK OF GENEROSITY.—One of the most penurious of bachelors one afternoon after attending the Opera, was guilty of making a gift under circumstances somewhat original. He entered a millinery store, and accosting a very pretty attendant, inquired the price of a hat which he saw in the window. She took it out, and in order to show its beauties, placed it on her own head with just pitch enough to make it taking. The old bachelor admired it, and pulling ten dollars from his pocket-book concluded to buy it. The attendant took the money, and with pencil in hand inquired where she should send it. "Wear it yourself, my dear," was his blunt reply as he left the store.—Boston Gaz.

SIXTY FIRST OF DAUGHTERS.—In the Half Century Sermon of Rev. Dr. BEACH, of New-Ington, Conn., we find a curious fact respecting the EDWARDS family. Speaking of Mr. BACKUS, one of his predecessors, he says: "His wife was one of ten daughters, every one of whom has been said to be six feet tall—making sixty feet of daughters, and all of them strong in mind—children of Rev. TIMOTHY EDWARDS, of East Windsor."

MARRIED.

At Jersey City, N. J., June 23, by Rev. W. Parmlee, ALEXANDER McDOUGALL, of New-York, to DORCAS L. BUNNETT, of the former place.

DIED.

The remains of JOHN F. CLARKE, who died at Virgin Bay May 8, having arrived, the funeral will take place from St. Peter's Church, Barclay st., on Monday morning, June 25, at 10 o'clock. The friends of the family, and those of his uncle Thomas Clarke, are respectfully invited to attend without further notice.

In this City, on Saturday night, JOHN P. HAMILTON, eldest son of the late James E. Hamilton.

His friends, and those of his family, are respectfully invited to attend his funeral on Monday, June 25, at 2 o'clock P. M., from the residence of his brother, 41 Lafayette-place.

In this City, on Sunday evening, June 24, of lingering illness, H. ELIZABETH, widow of the late C. H. Allaire.

Further particulars in Tuesday's papers.

In this City, on Saturday, June 23, in the 65th year of her age, MARY HYNE, widow of Gilbert Myer.

Her friends, and those of the family, are respectfully invited to attend her funeral from the residence of her son-in-law, De Witt C. Hays, No. 26 Bank st., to-day, (Monday,) at 4 o'clock P. M.

At Yorkville, New-York City, on Saturday evening, June 23, ANNA, youngest and only child of Francis J. and Ellen M. J. Feeney, aged 1 year and 6 months.

The friends and acquaintances of the family are respectfully invited to attend her funeral, from the residence of her parents in 85th st., between 2d and 3d ave., this day (Monday,) at 4 o'clock P. M. Her remains will be taken to Calvary Cemetery for interment.

At Yorkville, on Sunday, June 24, after a long illness, SPONSER HORN, aged 32 years, son-in-law of the late Joseph Keeler.

The friends and relatives of the family are respectfully invited to attend his funeral on Tuesday afternoon, June 26, at 4 o'clock, from his late residence, No. 106 46th st., between 3d and 4th ave. The remains will be taken to Greenwood Cemetery.

Philadelphia papers please copy.

In Brooklyn, June 19, LOUISA J. Myrtle av., aged 3 years. The remains were inter- e Cemetery of the Evergreens.

COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS.

For Markets see Third Page.

Sales at the Stock Exchange, June 23

$3,000 Virginia 6s		100	100	N. Y. Central Railroad			101
2,000 Tennessee 6s, '90		94	93½	do			100½
8,000 Indiana State 6s		84	85½	do			100½
10,000 Erie Con. Bs '71	bds	94	100	do			s30 101
3,000 do			100	do			s30 101
10,000 Erie Bds. of '55	s30	93	93	do			s60 101
5,000 do	s60	94	100	do			100
5,000 do		93	92½	do			s10 100
10,000 Erie Bonds of '76	b3	84	100	do			s60 100
10,000 do	s5	83	100	do			s30 100
1,000 Hud. R. 2d M. Bs		72	100	do			s10 100
4,000 Ill. Cen. R. Bs		86	100	do			s10 100½
12,000 do		83	100	do			s100
6,000 do		83	100	Harlem Railroad			s10 29
2,000 N. J. Cen. R. Bds		72	100	do			29
2,000 do		72	100	do			s10 29½
2,000 Ill. Frontend Bds		83	100	do			29½
12,000 Ill. C. R. R. Bs	b3	75	75	Chi. & R. I. Railroad			97
11,000 T. H. & Ill. 1st M.	b3	83	100	do			96
1,000 T. H. & Ill. 2d M.		70	100	Panama Railroad			135
5,000 do		69	100	Clev. C. & Chi. R. R.	b3		100
20 Ohio & Leather Bank		100	100	Erie Railroad			s2 51
200 Canton Company	s30	27½	100	do			s2 51
200 do	b60	28	100	do			51
100 do		27½	100	do			51
100 do	s30	27	100	do			b60 51
100 Mich. Cen. R. R.	s30	100	100	do			s10 51½
50 do		100	100	do			100 52
50 Erie Transit Co.	b3	17	50	do			s30 52
200 do	s2	16½	50	do			s30 51½
100 do	b30	17	100	do			s30 51
100 do	s30	17½	100	do			s10 51
75 Cumb. Coal Co.		31½	100	do			s60 52
100 do	b60	31½	50	do			b15 52
75 do		31½	100	do			b10 52
100 do	b60	31½	225	do			s2 52
100 do		31½	100	do			s30 52½
100 do		31½	200	do			b60 52½
200 do	b15	31	10	New Jersey R. R.			127
200 do	s60	31	75	Nor. & Wor. R. R.			40
100 do	s30	31½	175	Reading Railroad			s3 69
200 do	b60	31½	100	do			s 69
100 do	b15	31½	200	do			69
200 do		31	200	do			s60 69
100 do		31	100	do			s60 69
25 Clev. and Tol. R. R.		90	5	Clev. & Pittsburg R. R.			51
50 do	s3	89½	50	do			50
200 do		91	50	do			b15 50
50 do	s2	91½	50	do			50
100 do		91½	50	Galena and Chic R. R.			128
100 do		91½	50	do			s3 129
100 do	s60	90	50	Illinois Central R. R.			98

SECOND BOARD.

$1,000 Missouri 6s		87½	100	Cumb. Coal Co.			s60 31½
9,000 do		87	300	do			b30 31
19,000 Ill. C. R. R. Bs	s10	83	100	do			s60 31
1,000 do	b30	83	200	do			31
3,000 do		83	17	do			31
1,000 New York Cen. 7s		102	100	do			b60 31½
500 do		102½	100	do			s93 31
1,000 N. Y. Cen. R. R. Bs		100	200	do			31½
20 Chi. & R. I. R. R.		96	100	do			b7 30
10 do		96½	100	do			s60 30
100 Canton Company	b60	30	200	do			31
100 do	s60	29½	42	Erie Railroad			50
200 Reading Railroad	s30	69	100	do			b10 50
200 do	s30	69½	200	do			50
100 do	s30	69	100	do			s10 50
100 do	s60	69½	200	do			b30 50
200 do	b3	69½	100	do			s30 50½
100 do	s3	69	50	do			s2 52
50 Panama Railroad	s60	135

MONDAY, June 25—A. M.

One of the overdue steamers from California, with San Francisco dates to June 1, arrived last evening, by the Nicaragua route. The amount of Treasure on the freight list is $626,000. The steamer brings about three hundred passengers, who, no doubt, have a considerable amount of Gold dust, in consequence of the recent difficulties and distrust among the Exchange Bankers at San Francisco. The Market accounts show no improvement for Eastern shipments. Richmond Flour was selling below New-York prices, and Grains, of California growth, were in market at figures which would pay a good profit to ship to the Atlantic cities. Wheat, for example, is quoted at $1 50@$1 75. The Agricultural accounts from the interior of the State are extremely favorable, and so, too, are the mining advices, particularly where artificial water facilities have been introduced. In some localities, the production of Gold is freer than at any previous period. Several public meetings of the creditors of the suspended Banking Houses had been held in San Francisco. The particulars will be found among our miscellaneous extracts. The subject grows somewhat tiresome to the general reader, but parties interested as creditors, in the result of the investigation and liquidation of the unfortunate estates, will find the principal meeting fully reported. Our Sacramento correspondent writes that $40,000 of the principal and $55,000 of the July interest of the Debt of that City have been remitted to its New-York Bankers. The Fund Commissioners elected by Council are D. O. MILLS and A. P. STANFORD.

A very important decision by our Superior Court, in full bench, on the New-Haven Railroad case, was announced on Saturday, which gives much satisfaction—as well to dealers in railroad securities generally, as to the holders of the SCHUYLER certificates attempted to be repudiated by the New-Haven Management. The decision of the General Term of the Superior Court was rendered in the case of the Mechanics' Bank vs. The New-York and New-Haven Railroad Company, to the effect that the Company were liable in damages measured by the market value of the stock at the time of the over issue. Opinions were rendered by five of the Judges, Hon. Judge DURR declining to sit in the case, on account of personal interest in the result. Four of the Judges agreed that the Company were fully liable, Judge CAMPBELL alone dissenting, on the ground that the act of SCHUYLER in the over issue is parallel to that of the master of a ship signing fictitious bills of lading—a case adjudicated in the English Courts. In another column will be found the opinions. The case will probably be taken to the Court of Appeals, and on that decision will rest the rights of some three hundred and twenty-three other holders of the so-called spurious stock.

The past week was one of the most remarkable of the present season in the spirit and magnitude of business on the Stock Exchange. It was equally notable for the large sales of Public Securities, outside the Brokers' Board, at Auction here, and by award at the Canal Department at Albany. The aggregate transactions of the week figure up:

In the sale of Bonds at the Brokers' Board	$1,139,000
Sales of Shares at the Board, par value	11,000,000
Award of Canal Loans, with premium	9,250,000
Delaware and Lackawanna Loan by Auction	600,000
Other Securities by Auction	800,000
Utica and Schenectady Trust Sale	400,000
Private Sales of Railway Stocks	800,000
Total transactions of week	$18,189,000

The total bids for the two Canal Loans awarded at Albany amounted to $20,457,000, exclusive of premiums, or $17,707,000 in excess of the sums advertised for. At the Brokers' Board, the business of the week opened with considerable firmness, and improved rapidly until near the close of the morning session on Thursday, when the Western Road Stocks gave way and influenced, more or less, the temper of the dealings on the general list. The reaction continued on Friday and part of the day of Saturday, without, however, extending materially to the leading Road Stocks and Bonds nearer home. The course of prices through the week is thus marked:

	Opened Monday A. M.	Highest before noon	Lowest before P. M.	Closed P. M.
N. Y. Central	99	102½	101	101
Erie	49½	54	52	52
Hudson	39½	43	42	42
Harlem	28½	31	29	29
Reading	90½	92½	92	92
Panama	103	106	102	102
Southern Michigan	109	110½	108	108
Galena	105½	111	105	105
Rock Island	95	100	99	99
Toledo	87½	93½	91½	91½
Illinois Central Bonds	81½	84½	83	83
Erie Bonds, '75	90½	92½	91	91